AMERICA LIKELY TO PARTICIPATE

Conference On German Reparations May Soon Be Called.

OFFICIALS OBSERVE CAUTION

Spokesman For the Washington Administration Declare That Everything Depends Upon the Attitude of France—America Would Agree to Act Only in Advisory Capacity, Late Developments.

Washington, Oct. 27.—President Coolidge and Secretary Hughes observed extreme caution in commenting on the proposed American participation in a conference on German reparations.

The official viewpoint of the administration, stated by a spokesman for the president, is that everything depends upon the attitude of France. The executive desired exact information on the extent to which that government is willing to go toward accepting the judgment of a commission of experts on Germany's ability to pay, it was officially asserted.

David Lloyd George, Britain's former premier, said that he regards the European situation more hopefully than at any time since France's invasion of Germany was begun. He regards the exchange of notes between Secretary Hughes and Lord Curzon, together with the provisional acceptance by France, as indications that something soon will be done to straighten out the reparations muddle.

Senator Borah, author of the resolution which died in the last congress, calling for the appointment of an economic conference, expressed the view that the new developments in the international situation may lead to a definite settlement.

William Jennings Bryan, in an interview with Lloyd George, told the latter that he believed the way is open to the restoration of order, but that America must not surrender "one whit of its sovereignty."

In reply to inquiries at the white house as to what further steps may be taken by this government toward calling a conference, it was stated for the present that nothing further can or will be done until France's reply to the suggestions has been received and studied.

If the French reply is entirely satisfactory and contains no conditions to which the American and British government can not agree, it was stated that the next question to be decided is whether the representatives of the various governments should be selected directly by those governments or by the reparations commission. It is believed that the United States will insist upon naming her own representatives if the administration makes a decision to go into the conference. France is understood to be insisting that the examination by the experts and the entire work of the conference shall be kept wholly within the jurisdiction of the reparations commission.

The conditional acceptance by France, as reported to the state department, is not entirely satisfactory. The report made by the charge d'affaires of the French embassy is that France will agree to a conference upon two conditions, that it be under the reparations commission and that the findings of the conference shall be binding on all governments. The American note plainly stated that the United States would agree to act only in an advisory capacity and it could not become officially a participant in the reparations squabble.

Ohioans Get Medals.
Pittsburgh, Oct. 27.—Eight Ohioans were recognized by the Carnegie hero fund commission. Two of these, Harold L. Richard and Arthur Sheridan of Chillicothe, lost their lives. Fathers of the two men were given bronze medals. Others are: H. C. Heitkamp, Cincinnati; Melvin Allen, Cleveland; James R. Cecil, Martins Ferry; Alonzo Dawson, Cleveland; John J. Schoff, Dayton, and Aurelius E. Pullen, Akron.

Far East Fleet Bill Rejected.
Amsterdam, Oct. 27.—The second chamber, after three weeks of discussion, rejected by a vote of 50 to 49 the "far east fleet bill," providing for three naval bases in the Dutch East Indies and the Pacific, as well as an augmented fleet. It is believed that the government will resign as a result of the vote. The opponents of the measure argue that the cost of the fleet and the naval bases would be too great and would bring entangling engagements with other Pacific powers.

FRANK B. KELLOGG

Former Senator to Be Appointed Ambassador to England.

TO SUCCEED HARVEY

Former Senator Kellogg to Be Next Ambassador to Britain.

Washington, Oct. 27.—Frank B. Kellogg, former United States senator from Minnesota, will be the next American ambassador to Great Britain, it was learned here. President Coolidge will make the announcement as soon as certain diplomatic formalities are attended to. Great Britain must approve the appointment as a matter of courtesy, and it is understood Britain regards the appointment as acceptable. Kellogg is preparing to sail for England Nov. 11, if the appointment is formally made known by President Coolidge in time.

Mr. Kellogg is a lawyer by profession. He was a personal friend of the late President Harding. During the single term he served in the senate he devoted considerable attention to foreign affairs, was a leader of the "mild reservationists" in the Versailles treaty fight, and served as a member of the foreign relations committee. Kellogg was defeated for reelection by Henrik Shipstead, Farmer-Labor candidate.

Get Personal Service on Ford.
Detroit, Oct. 27.—By breaking in uninvited Fred Glinski and Arthur Harker, deputy sheriffs, got personal service on Henry Ford with a subpoena, the first time such a thing has happened in years. Last May Ford was named defendant in a $100,000 suit brought by B. Frank Emery for alleged personal injuries suffered in 1919, when he was thrown from an automobile owned by Ford. Since then deputy sheriffs have tried many times to get personal service on Ford, but only to meet with defeat at the hands of the emissaries of the auto maker.

SHADE SHADES WELLS

California Welterweight Too Much For the English Boxer.

New York, Oct. 27.—"Bermondsday Billy" Wells turned out to be another England bloomer last night against Dave Shade, the California welterweight, in their 15-round bout in Madison Square garden. Wells, who was highly regarded, took 10 blows to land one. And when he endeavored to land the one, a right, Shade generally made him miss entirely or so as to make the blow of little moment. Only in the fourteenth round, when he caught Shade off balance and whipped over the right, did Wells seem to have a chance of winning. The chance quickly faded as Shade dodged off the ropes and made Wells miss so badly he went to his hands and knees. Wells took only one round, the third Shade was awarded the decision.

To Gather Exhibits.

New London, Conn., Oct. 27.—Bound on a two-year cruise of Antarctic, Arctic and Indian oceans, the three-masted schooner Blossom will leave here Monday to gather exhibits for the Cleveland museum of natural history. The ship is named for Mrs. Elizabeth Bingham Blossom of Cleveland, who is bearing the expense of the expedition.

Chance to Manage White Sox.
Chicago, Oct. 27.—Frank Chance, veteran baseball star, has been made manager of the Chicago White Sox baseball team, it was announced by the club management.

RIOTING OCCURS AT MANY POINTS

Incidents of Another Feverish Day for Germany.

FATAL CLASHES RECORDED

Closing of Stinnes Coal Mines Brings About a Demonstration of Miners, Ending in Raids on Stores—Fresh Battles Occur in Rhineland Between Separatists and Police—Port of Hamburg Closed by Strike.

Berlin, Oct. 27.—Rioting, looting and plundering, new strikes, lockouts in the Ruhr mines, and fresh battles between separatists and police in the Rhineland, were incidents of another feverish day for Germany.

The Stinnes order closing the coal mines at Dueseldorf brought about a demonstration by more than 4,000 miners, ending in raids on stores and food shops throughout Dueseldorf. Many shots were fired and hundreds of windows were smashed by sticks and stones hurled by the jobless rioters. Many received minor injuries.

Three persons were killed and 17 wounded at Essen in riots which followed a demonstration of workers at the big Krupp works. Looting which the police were powerless to curb followed the wage riots, in which the police were bombarded by the hungry workers with chunks of burning coke.

Three were killed and 20 wounded at Harburg, near Hamburg, in serious riots when the communists clashed with the police.

The Upper Silesian coal mines were tied up by a general strike.

The port strike at Hamburg has effectively closed that harbor and new riots were reported from various sections of the city. Many steamers were turned back without unloading, including the big Cunarder Manchuria, which had more than 7,000 tons of foodstuffs for Germany.

In the Rhineland the French and Belgian troops maintained an attitude of neutrality, although the population were strictly forbidden to use firearms against the separatists, while the latter remained mysteriously armed.

There was serious fighting at Duisburg. The separatists seized the municipal buildings Thursday and strong attempts were made today to dislodge them. There were several casualties. The separatists were ejected from the city hall at Bonn when the place was stormed by the police. There were clashes between the separatists at Coblenz and the separatists divested a large number of the German police of their uniforms. Dressing themselves in the seized garments they mingled with the crowds in the streets, causing much confusion.

FORBES DENIES ALL CHARGES OF GRAFT

Veterans' Bureau May Be Placed Under Cabinet Officer.

Washington, Oct. 27.—There were interesting developments in the case involving the administration of former Director Charles R. Forbes of the veterans' bureau.

Announcement was made that the senate investigating committee will recommend that the veterans' bureau be placed under the direct control of a cabinet officer. Forbes issued a statement denying in full all charges of graft and corruption placed against him before the senate committee.

E. L. Morse, who has been subpoenaed from Excelsior Springs, Mo., to testify concerning the sale of property he owned to the bureau for hospital purposes arrived here, ready to take the stand. Department of justice agents continued their probe of graft charges made against the Forbes administration.

Matthew O'Brien, San Francisco architect, who was paid $64,000 for drawing plans that were never used for the Livermore (Cal.) hospital, was subpoenaed to testify before the committee.

The senate committee will urge and insist that the bureau, which is now functioning independently of other government departments, be placed under the supervision of a cabinet officer, Chairman David A. Reed of Pennsylvania announced. "A government bureau which is spending nearly $500,000,000 annually should certainly have the careful supervision of a cabinet officer or given the status of a department itself," Senator Reed declared. It is known that President Coolidge is favorable to such a plan.

DOINGS IN OHIO

Error Rectified.

Columbus, Oct. 27.—An error in the clerical section of the state department of highways caused some automobile license money to be paid for constructing gravel roads in three counties, according to a statement issued by L. A. Boulay, director, in reply to charges of the Republican state headquarters. The error has been corrected and the auditor has been ordered to pay the money out of inter-county highway or main market funds.

Haynes Not to Run.

Columbus, Oct. 27.—In a brief statement issued here, Federal Prohibition Commissioner Roy A. Haynes indicated he would not be a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor of Ohio. He said: "I am so engrossed in the heavy duties and responsibilities of the federal office I now hold that I have not given any definite consideration to the suggestion that I become a candidate."

Alleged Blackmailers Arraigned.

Cincinnati, Oct. 27.—Rose Putnam and Don Osborn of Los Angeles, Cal., pleaded not guilty when arraigned in the United States district court here on an indictment charging them with conspiring to blackmail John L. Bushnell, banker of Springfield, O., son of the late Governor Asa S. Bushnell. Judge Smith Hickenlooper set their trial for the week of Dec. 10.

Logan, O., Oct. 27.—County health officials, alarmed by an epidemic of typhoid fever in this county, are investigating the drinking water of those afflicted to ascertain if it is contaminated. Eighteen cases of the disease have been reported: Falls township 4, Starr 6, Washington 4 and Ward 4.

Four Children Perish.

Dillonvale, O., Oct. 27.—Four children, ranging from 9 to 12 years, were burned to death when the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Andrejki, was destroyed by fire. One son, 15, was saved. The parents suffered severe burns in attempting to save the other four.

WALTON TRIAL OPENS THURSDAY

Suspended Governor Faces Many Impeachment Charges.

SENATE SETS HEARING DATE

Oklahoma Legislature to Begin an Investigation of Charges Against the Ku Klux Klan—Grand Jury to Be Summoned For the Same Purpose in Each County of the State. Walton to Answer Accusers.

Oklahoma City, Oct. 27.—Trial of J. C. Walton, suspended governor of Oklahoma, on 22 impeachment allegations will commence at 10 o'clock next Thursday morning. Meantime other articles may be filed against him by an inquisitorial committee of the house of representatives.

While Walton is answering his accusers and the machinery under control of the house and senate will be started moving in an investigation of charges against the Ku Klux Klan, a grand jury will be summoned in each county of the state, and all the powers of law enforcement will be set to work to get at the truth regarding the Klan activities and the order's alleged influence over local officials, who also will be investigated.

"Waltonism will be stamped out," said Speaker W. D. McBee of the house. "Then we'll go straight down the line to the most remote corners of the state. Walton was not sincere about this, but we are."

A joint resolution demanding the Klan's investigation was passed by the senate and a committee appointed. The house already had adopted the measure and the speaker named a committee of three, "two of whom," he announced, "are not members of the Klan, the third being a Catholic." This matter being amended, the house proceeded to impeach Walton on the final count, a general charge of incompetence. All charges then were compiled and the house board of seven managers presented them to the senate, which immediately resolved into a court of impeachment presided over by Chief Justice Johnson of the supreme court and whose members were sworn by him to give the accused an impartial hearing and to deal justly.

The charges were consolidated in the senatorial court, to permit of only one process being served, but each will be tried and decided on its individual merits. The impeachment court then set the hour of trial and directed that 8 summons and certified copy of the impeachment articles be served upon the former chief executive.

MOVE TO UNSEAT MAYFIELD

Ku Klux Klan Issue to Be Brought Before Federal Senate.

Fort Worth, Tex., Oct. 27.—The Ku Klux Klan issue is to be brought before the United States senate during the next session of congress. This was made virtually certain in the open movement to unseat Earle B. Mayfield, the Texas senator, accused of being prominently identified with the Klan. The situation is developing in such a way as to give anxiety to a number of senators from states in which the hooded organization has developed great strength.

The Mayfield case, in the opinion of those who are familiar with the evidence, which is to be submitted to the senate committee on privileges and elections, is destined to create great interest. It will be submitted by Bailey, Nichols and Bailey of Dallas, who will direct the fight to unseat Mayfield. These attorneys will place before the country what is declared to be irrefutable evidence of how the Klan works when it sets out to elect one of the hooded brothers to high office. Some of the charges already outlined involve alleged intimidation of voters, the taking over of the election machinery in important counties by the Klan and the spending of a vast sum of money.

Plead Guilty in Rum Plot.

Wheeling, W. Va., Oct. 27.—Fred Fuller of Columbus, alleged originator of the $2,000,000 Hermitage (Tenn.) alcohol plot, and William Schultz of Wheeling, on trial for conspiracy to violate the national prohibition laws, reversed their pleas of not guilty to guilty. Sentence was deferred. Four co-defendants have indicated their intention to combat the federal indictment to a jury verdict.

FAVORS BUDGET SYSTEM

Senator Borah Says It Would Curb Extravagance.

Washington, Oct. 27.—Senator Borah of Idaho declared here that he was thoroughly in sympathy with the budget system and believed that it ought to be respected and maintained. "There is no governmental evil more menacing just now," he said, "than that of extravagance or the waste of public funds. The budget system is designed to and, if carried out will, effectuate economy in public expenditures, and will save the taxpayers millions and millions of dollars. It is not likely, however, that we shall be able to maintain our national budget system unless public opinion is thoroughly informed and aroused to its defense. At the last session of congress, for example, the budget recommended an appropriation of $27,000,000 for rivers and harbors work; but congress disregarded this recommendation and appropriated $56,000,000.

"There are numerous other instances of this sort that could be cited but we ought, nevertheless, to undertake to restore the budget system and preserve it for the orderly and businesslike administration of government finances."

Passion Players Coming.

Berlin, Oct. 27.—Dire poverty has forced the villagers of Oberammergau to break with long tradition and is driving the Passion Players out into the materialistic world to earn bread. Anton Lang, famous for his role as Christ, together with a dozen others, will start for America in about a fortnight to open a small pottery and wood carving exhibit in New York. They are going to America for the purpose of earning money for Oberammergau in order that the Passion Play might again be given on time.

CANCELLATION OF DEBTS

France Would Have United States Consider Proposition.

Paris, Oct. 27.—France is perfectly willing to allow a commission of experts, including Americans, to assemble to "discuss" the reparations problem, but France will refuse to take any part in any international conference such as is proposed by Secretary Hughes and Premier Baldwin, unless the United States and Britain expressly declare beforehand that they are ready to consider cancellation of, or at least a large reduction in, inter-allied debts.

Thus it is increasingly evident that France is playing her German claims as a card in the game for the cancellation of her war debts. France reasons that if England and America see Germany breaking up and ruin menacing Europe, they will be forced to retrace their steps and admit the cancellation of debts. This now looks as the underlying reason for the French policy toward Germany.

Shoe Man Dead.

Cincinnati, Oct. 27.—Lawrence B. Cahill, president of the Cahill Shoe company, this city, died at his home after a long illness. He was 64 years old.

taken away to the hospital, you could hear him, most any time, hummin' some of the songs they sing down there. "If Your Heart Keeps Right" was his favorite and I guess it is the favorite of most of us.

"Right there was where I felt as if I ought to beg his pardon for the thoughts I had held about that song. "But just then we came to the plain little cottage where he said Bill lived so we shook hands, with hearty good will and parted.

"I had to climb down some very rickety steps for the poor place was below the level of the street, and as I did so I heard some one singing. 'Every cloud will wear a rainbow if your heart keeps right.' I walked quietly to the door and looked into a very neat, clean room, but oh, so poorly furnished. There was a woman in it, sitting in the only rocking chair and on her lap there lay a very frail man baby. "She had one of the tabernacle song books open. I recognized it at once, and I think I was not surprised when her clear, true voice kept on with the words of the very song which I had so disliked. But now it brought tears to my eyes. For she was very pale and worn and shabby—a weak little woman, with big tender eyes and she looked into a distant corner of the room as if she had her attention fixed on a pleasant vision, while she sang.

"She saw me before she was quite thru with the verse, but she kept on as she smiled and held out her hand.

"Altho she was so poor, there was a quiet self possession about her which comes from self respecting womanhood. I told her that her husband's employer had sent me to see if there was anything she needed. She said that her great worry was not having enough money—at least, money that she could spare—to go over to the hospital to see her husband. She wanted to visit him very much.

"I told her I thought that could be arranged. And then I asked her if she liked the song she had been singing. You should have seen her face light up.

"Oh, yes, indeed, she loved it! She had found such a lot of comfort out of the tabernacle songs, especially this one.

"Then I asked her some casual questions, and she began to talk about the different songs, in the course of which she told me something which I think is the most affecting and touching tribute to the songs that I have ever heard. That song book was the only one in the whole neighborhood. They were all very poor in the district. So the neighbor who had been able to buy the solitary song book loaned it out first to one family and then another, so that all might learn to sing the songs. This was Mrs. Jones' 'day' for the book.

"She gave me a wonderful smile as she said at the end that, altho things looked blue and discouraging, she believed in the promise of the rainbow over the clouds 'if your heart keeps right.' "

All thru the simple, affecting telling of that story you could see tears and smiles sweeping across the faces of the splendid women, who listened with such strained attention. There was a little pause as the speaker stopped to regain her composure and then she turned to me and said:

"I want to apologize for what I thought, and said about that song. I think, now, that it is one of the most beautiful I know. Any song which can bring joy and happiness to a whole whole neighborhood as that has done, merits the consideration and the help of those who may not need it in the same way."

Of course, we sang the chorus of "If Your Heart Keeps Right." Then we closed the meeting and those wealthy women flocked around her who had told the story. As they did so I saw that most of them had money concealed in their fingers, which they slipped to her as secretly as they could.

So I was sure that material prosperity would be added to that other and greater happiness which the little woman in the cottage had found.

HOW TOPS WITCH

"DEED it is a witch, Mr. King, sir; I done seeer with my own eyes. Last night when wes in the cabin playing cayrds something brushed past the window. Sam, he says, 'I bet that's High Top's witch.' Which? I asks, and Sam tells us. She roams the mountains, and its bad luck for the man that sees or tries to catch her. Joe, he once give chase, when the witch come prowlin' around the messhouse, and she throws a laugh at him and gets quick behind a tree, and when Joe looked all about she wasn't there; an' next day Joe lost his job, diggin' on High Top."

"Glen King laughed, but the golden-haired child on his knee warned: "It is true what Jim says. I saw the witch one evening just as I was going off to sleep. Aster Monna had tucked me into bed and kissed me good-night. She threw a rose from the edge right through my window and into my bed—and first she kissed the rose—so I wasn't afraid at all. Maybe its only bad men that she punishes. Mr. King; Joe was a bad nigger, Mary Murphy says. He gambled money and took all poor Tim Murphy had."

"Information bureau," Glen King remarked, and pinched the little girl's cheek.

"So you have seen the witch, and are not afraid of her, Angel—and Monna says that red roses mean love?" Glen King was quite unfutored in the ways of John Kirkwood's daughter. And the chief engineer was.

Glen was torn with jealousy at times by the sight of Monna, walking the sweet mountain trails at the side of Bob Whitely. Bob, a New Yorker like himself, had come with the engineering commission, as secretary to Mr. Kirkwood, and Glen could not get over his dislike and suspicion regard- ing the ingratiating stranger. Monna appeared not to share this dislike. Sighing now, he put the child down from his knee and left the cabin; Angel walked at his side.

"And if you don't believe in the witch, Mr. King," she continued in her favorite topic, "you just watch for her some evening on High Top."

Glen sat long in the moonlight at his cabin door that night; Jim, as usual was absent. As he sat across the moon-lit path fled a shadow. He got to his feet, interested—the witch, beyond a doubt. He saw a dark enveloping cape, a peaked hood rolled low.

The witch eluded him; but moon-light showed a touch of scarlet lining, where the person's arm had tightened for a moment the cape about her—or him.

Next day Glen King astonishingly received notice that his services on the great engineering commission were dispensed with. When he sought out his chief John Kirkwood received him coldly.

"This grieves me more than it can possibly grieve you," he said. "If I had not undoubted authority, I would not find it possible to believe you guilty of the very fault you have apparently been eager to help me to subdue. You were an active gambler at last night's disgraceful meeting on High Top."

Stunned, indignant, Glen King spoke but one word. "Mistaken," he said brusquely, and went to pack his things.

Black Jim brought him coffee, "Dad rascal call himself Bob Whitely, tell Mr. Kirkwood lies 'bout you, Mr. King," Jim said. "Pretendin' to look up the gamblers when he's one of 'em. Dressed up like you last night. Went to the whites' cabin. Got out so no one could catch him, an' den made the detective believe it was yo'self. I know it. An' it's Miss Monna Kirkwood that rascal wants, an' maybe'll get her, on account of his smooth ways."

"But to think," Glen murmured bitterly, "that after all our association Mr. Kirkwood would disbelieve in me—"

"Dat Bob," Jim confirmed, "is mighty smooth, Mr. King." Glen bowed his head in his head—toward him a slender figure came. The negro flew. "The witch!" the disheartened man heard him cry. Glen raised his head. Monna stood before him. A dark cape wrapped about her, its lining showed scarlet. She held out to him a wide black ribbon. "The peaked hood," she said and smiled.

"I have been High Top witch, Glen," she came to sit beside him. "After Angel was put to bed for the night I roamed the Top; really it was fun, but I had an object. Bob Whitely had whispered things about you—had insinuated to father. I had to know. So, I peeked in the cabin windows where games were played. How did I know where to go? I followed Mary Murphy's Tim one night, secretly. She had bewailed the fact of his nightly visits. And last night, Glen, I saw through a cabin door, left open but for a moment to admit a man—that man dressed as you might be dressed—but it was not you. I have told my father who the man was. And here I saw you, solitary, on your own doorstep—until you went in to bar for the night your cabin door. I have told my father that, too. Tomorrow it will be Bob Whitely who will leave the High Top com-mis-sion—and not you, my Glen, dear!"

His longing arm was around the slender figure in the dark cape. "It was love for you all along," said Monna.

SAIL OVER THE MOUNTAINS

Few Persons Know Ocean Liners Actually Travel Over Submarine Peaks.

The main features of some parts of the bottom of the sea are, in many instances, as familiar to scientists as are those of the land on which we live, although no complete maps of the ocean bed have as yet been made.

Of the oceans, the Atlantic has been more thoroughly surveyed than any other.

Probably not one in a thousand persons who traverse the Atlantic knows that at various stages of the trip liners actually sail over mountains. Fewer still realize that in some instances the peaks of these mountains are almost uncomfortably close to the surface.

The biggest of these submarine mountains is known to science as Mt. Laura Ethel. It lies roughly midway between Liverpool and New York, and is at least 12,000 feet in height. Its summit being less than 100 feet from the surface.

Another mountain, Piacentia, in the South Atlantic, is almost an island, for its peak is less than 20 feet from the surface.

The Faraday hills, in the North Atlantic, have been the subject of much exploration by means of soundings. Recent investigations show that the currents have deposited at the base of the biggest of the group the wreckage of over 5,000 vessels of all kinds.

It seems, therefore, that the distinction of being the real "Davy Jones' Locker" can with good reason be ascribed, as it has been, to this eerie under-sea locality.

NET IS USED TO GUARD Lighthouse FROM BIRDS

Ducks, Gulls and Songsters Meet Death While Seeking Haven at St. Simond's Light.

Like the candle that attracts the moths the lighthouse on St. Simonds Island, just off the coast of southern Georgia attracts thousands of birds. It has become necessary for the government to erect a large steel net around the glass in the top of the tower to save the windows from further injury and to protect the light and its powerful lens from possible destruction.

The light is of 2,200-candle power and is in a tower 104 feet high. It is visible on a clear night for a distance of sixteen miles, and according to C. O. Svenson, keeper of the lighthouse, offers as much fascination to the fowls of the air as the white lights of Broadway offer to the thousands of Americans who annually visit New York.

"During the migrating season thousands of birds fly into the net," Keeper Svenson said, "and on a dark and stormy night the net is worked overtime. Then the birds believe the light offers them a haven from the wind, but instead it lures many of them to their death."

"The lighthouse does not observe any of the game laws, but gets all the birds that come toward it. Quite often I pick up birds of rare plumage. Quite often the birds are killed outright, but some of them escape death and are either badly stunned or suffer broken wings. These I kill to end their suffering, and feel that in doing so I am showing them mercy."

"Ducks, rice birds, quail and doves often fly into the net and after day-break I gather them up, dress them and they are soon on my dining table."

H. C. Hopkins, the taxidermist, has mounted a large variety of specimens and a visit to his home gives the impression of having walked into a bird convention.

"The lighthouse is to blame for many of the birds here," Mr. Hopkins explained.

"One morning Mr. Hopkins classified the birds picked up and in this collection were Maryland yellow throats, black and white warbler, black throated blue warbler, American red start, parula warbler, iron bird, water thrush, yellow billed cuckoo, yellow warblers, black crowned night heron gulls of every variety, cat birds, Connecticut warblers, owls of several different varieties and several varieties of ducks."

CANNOT FIND OWNER OF $20 Finder of Bill Discovers Honesty Not So Uncommon.

City Clerk Mansfield of Northampton, Mass., is firmly convinced that there are still honest folks around in the world. Recently Mr. Mansfield and a party of friends motored to Springfield and parked in front of a theater. As Mr. Mansfield left his car he saw a new and crisp $20 bill on the sidewalk and promptly picked it up. The hour was just before the beginning of the performance and the street was crowded, but the finder decided that the money must have been dropped by a party of people who had got out of a big car just as it reached the curb.

Walking into the lobby, he presented the bill to one of the women who expressed the opinion that some of her friends might have lost it. Mr. Mansfield left his address with the woman and several nights later received a letter containing a check for $20 and explaining that a checking up among the people had revealed that the money must have been lost by someone else.

CARBON EXPLODES

Jerome Warner Had Narrow Escape—
Auto is a Complete Wreck.

A can of carbon bisulphide nearly cost the life of Jerome Warner Friday afternoon. He had been troubled by his wheat heating and thought the source of the trouble was weevil in the grain. He came to town and secured a gallon of the carbon bisulphide and placed it in his closed car and started homeward. When near the home of Jacob Glick the contents of the can became warmed up and exploded. The fumes were ignited by sparks of the autos and in a moment the interior of the car was a mass of flames. Mr. Warner, with some difficulty made his escape, but not before his mustache, eyebrows and hair was badly singed. The car is a complete wreck. The metal parts and the glass in the frame were melted by the intense heat. Mr. Warner carried no insurance on the car.

Nationally Known Speakers Will be Here
Thursday, November 8.

Just returned from Europe where he has been studying the international situation, Kirby Page will present recent and firsthand information regarding European affairs to people of this city and vicinity who attend the conference on international relations, to be held under church auspices at the Methodist Episcopal church in this city on Thursday, November 8.

Mr. Page is secretary of the Fellowship for a Christian Social order. While abroad he gathered material for a book now in preparation entitled "Is War Justifiable?"

KIRBY PAGE.

He is one of seven speakers who will conduct the series of 33 local conferences on international relations to be held throughout Ohio during the three weeks preceding Armistice day and culminating in general observance of that anniversary in the churches as World Court Sunday.

Accompanying Mr. Page on the local program will be Everett Colby, New York lawyer, chairman of the executive committee of the League of Nations Non-Partisan association and former Republican national committeeman.

Hotel Stenographer
BY ROE FULKERSON

* * * * *

"Kid," said the House Detective, "don't you ever get yourself married to no man who works on a payroll. Marry some guy who is in business if you want to get along."

"Kelly," said the Hotel Stenographer, "I am not old enough yet to enjoy having anybody call me 'Kid,' so can that stuff, if you hope to sit in the same hammock with me."

"Neither am I kid enough to think that the woman who marries the successful business man is going to be the happiest married lady that is. Not many women are willing to swap a husband for a snappy roadster of their own. Most women who get married do it, not for money but for a home. A home without a husband is like egg nog with the nog left out."

"When a guy leans up against a payroll, his work stops when the whistle blows. He has time to be husband and a father. A girl, who hooks up with an ambitious young business man, generally finds herself playing second fiddle to the business. Her husband is either downtown, meeting a man, or walking the floor wondering how he is going to meet that note."

"There never was a wife who really believed her husband was going down town at night to meet a man. No matter how true it is, she can never see any reason why business cannot be done during business hours. When he says he is going downtown to put thru a business deal, she is sure that there is something about it he does not want her to know."

"No woman is happy when her husband has any secrets from her. If he tells her about his business, she is unhappy because he will not take her advice."

"Then there ain't no woman who is happy?" asked Kelly.

"Not unless her husband is working for a salary and leaves his work at the office," replied the girl.

Not Notified of Election.

A singular omission in the matter of legal formalities is the failure of the laws of the United States to provide for notifying a President-elect of his election. The result of the electoral vote is recorded in the journals of both houses of congress, but it is left for the President-elect to find out the result in whatever way he can, and to present himself for inauguration on the next succeeding fourth day of March.

CITES CONDITIONS

French Premier's Note to Britain Dispatched From Paris.

London, Oct. 27.—It is learned that Premier Poincare's note to Lord Curzon, in reply to the expressed wish of Premier Baldwin regarding a reparations conference, has been dispatched from Paris. It is stated that the note is a strictly qualified acceptance of the expert commission plan originally proposed by Secretary Hughes.

It is learned that the points of the note include the following: No neutral or German representatives to be invited; the commission not to function until France is satisfied that passive resistance has completely ceased and reparations in kind are delivered on the scale as in January last, and that the commission does not take upon itself to recommend a reduction in the total indemnity.

The note further intimates that Premier Poincare will not agree to any reduction in the French claim of 26 milliards of gold marks as the French share of reparations.

Mrs. E. L. Tolbert very delightfully entertained the members of the Woman's Home Missionary society and their friends at her home on Walnut street, Thursday afternoon. A piano solo by James Ferguson was greatly appreciated. Dainty refreshments, served by the hostess and her committee, added to the sociability of the occasion.

DUE TO BREAKDOWN

Doctor Steinmetz, Electrical Wizard,
Died of Exhaustion.

Schenectady, N. Y., Oct. 27.—The death of Dr. Charles P. Steinmetz, master electrician, who passed away at his home here, was due to physical exhaustion, resulting from a long lecture tour in the west. Dr. Steinmetz was a native of Germany and was 58 years old. He was known as the wizard who snatched lightning from the skies and made the thunderbolt do his bidding. The doctor's career had its beginning in New York in 1839, where, penniless and able to speak but very little English, he arrived from Zurich, Switzerland. He was chief consulting engineer of the General Electrical company.

FRIEDMAN'S
APPAREL FOR WOMEN

AMUSEMENTS

A photoplay based on the play which a few years ago was one of the hits of Broadway is "Success" scheduled for presentation on Monday at the Met theater with Brandon Tynan the stage star in the role which he originally created in the spoken story and the excellence of the cast play. The dramatic interest in the which interprets the various roles should make the presentation a distinct hit.

"Success" is a story of the theater, but unlike many of the type, this is said to have been written by persons familiar with the intimate details of life behind the footlights. Its authors have managed to capture the spirit and atmosphere of the playhouse, and the characters which they have introduced are all faithful, actual types.

In addition to Mr. Tynan, the cast includes the delightful screen actress, Mary Astor, as the talented daughter; Naomi Childers as the mother; and Dore Davidson, Lionel Adams, Stanley Ridges, Robert Lee Keeling, Billy Quirk and others. The photoplay is presented by Murray W. Garsson, and released by Metro Pictures Corporation. It is a Ralph Ince production, written and adapted by Adeline Leitzbach and Theodore A. Liebler Jr. George V. Hobart wrote the titles.

THAT DISAGREEABLE CHATTER

Unless properly oiled the transmission bands on Ford cars cause a disagreeable chatter, especially at this time of year. This can be entirely eliminated by the use of Warco motor oil which we have sold for the last three years and which our customers tell us is the best oil they have ever put into a Ford car. Our crank case service costs you nothing, you pay only for the oil used.

The Curfew Bell.

The curfew bell formerly was rung in England, at sunset in summer and at 8 o'clock in winter—the object of which was to warn the people to cover up their fires, extinguish their lamps and candles and retire to rest. The custom is a Norman one, and is said to have been introduced into England by William the Conqueror in 1068, as a precaution against fires in the days of chimneyless wooden houses. This enactment was repealed in the reign of Henry I, in 1100. There is a good reason, however, for believing that a similar custom existed in England in the days of Alfred the Great (871-901), and William the Conqueror merely ordained that it should be universally observed, and that penalties should be imposed upon those that neglected to attend to the signal. The Puritans introduced the custom into New England, and Longfellow speaks, in the Bells of Lynn, of the "curfew of the setting sun" as heard at Nahant.

Power in Kilowatt-Hour.

The following figures, compiled by French officials, are worth attention: One kilowatt-hour of electrical energy will drive a sewing machine for 20 hours; clean 15 steel table knives for a year; clip 5 horses or 25 sheep; heat water for shaving for one month; light 3 cigars a day for 5 years; heat a flat-iron for 3 hours; boil 2.37 gallons of water; fry 15 chops in 15 minutes; heat a curling iron for 20 mornings; incubate 250 eggs; milk 20 cows; separate 350 gallons of milk; churn 440 pounds of butter; chop half a ton of straw. Assuming these items to be approximately correct, one-third should be added to each in computing the work of a horsepower-hour.—Compressed Air Magazine.

"Roland for an Oliver."

The expression, "A Roland for an Oliver," meaning a retort for retort, or the matching of one incredible lie with another, is derived from the fanciful tales told by the old chroniclers concerning the marvelous deeds of Roland and Oliver, the two most famous of the twelve paladins of Charlemagne, says the Detroit News. These redoubtable heroes were so evenly matched that neither was able to surpass the other; and accordingly, to test their relative superiority, they met in single combat and fought for five successive days on an island in the Rhine, without either gaining the least advantage over the other.

Right to His Teeth.

After a row with his dentist, Hoffy declared that he would have something to say to that gentleman. The boys at the club would not think Hoffy would have the nerve. When he came in a week later they were not backward in putting the question direct: "So you told the dentist what you thought of him?" "Said it to his teeth," he answered firmly. "When?" they asked. "Yesterday afternoon." "He was out of town yesterday afternoon," Hoffy was not disconcerted at this. "I told you I said it to his teeth."—Baltimore News.

A Gold-Plated Carriage.

Historians agree that the most valuable carriage in the world is one found in the palace of the Trianon at Versailles, that was built for Charles X of France, and under instructions to spare no pains or cost in making it fit for the regal and rather bizarre tastes that prevailed in those days, so from the tip of the pole to the hind wheels the carriage is plated with heavy gold decorations, the cost of construction then being in excess of $200,000. Today it would be many times that sum.

Gloaming.

The gloaming came, silverly. The dew glistened on the fronds of the ferns, in the cups of the moss. The stars emerged delicately, as the eyes of fawns shining through the green gloom of the forest. . . . A cool green freshness came into the air. The stars were as wind-whirled fruit blown upward from the tree-tops. The moon, full-orbed and with a pulse of flame, a tide of soft light across the brown shores of the world. . . . —Fiona Macleod.

Poison Ivy.

Although poison ivy is one of the worst offenders it frequently is blamed for poisoning caused by other plants. The Department of Agriculture has a list of more than 100 of such plants that grow in this country, and it is probable that there are others that may be poisonous to some persons. Not all of these plants are equally poisonous, and, too, there is great variation in the susceptibility of persons.—Scientific American.

Right-Handedness.

Of two pay telephones in a shop, the one on the right side took four times as much money as the one on the left. This curious influence of the dominant side of the body was lately demonstrated by evidence that speakers before a large audience have a tendency to address the right-hand side if the speaker happens to be left-handed. The same unconscious tendency may be seen in the schoolroom.

Before the Stars and Stripes.

The flag which the colonies all used before the Stars and Stripes was adopted was variously known as the congress colors, the grand union flag, and the first navy ensign. It consisted of 13 stripes, alternately red and white, typifying the 13 colonies, with a union bearing the crosses of St. George and St. Andrew combined—the national flag of Great Britain—signifying the mother country.

Waking Sleep-Walkers.

Some sleep-walkers may be awakened by being gently touched or called; others by a flash of light, by stumbling in their wanderings, or by setting their feet in water. Others remain so heavily asleep that it is necessary to shake them vigorously before they show signs of waking. But sometimes it is not wise to wake the sleep-walker at all, and there have been cases where sudden rousings have proved fatal.

Cut Before Bugs Emerge.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Fall or winter is the best time to apply control measures to raspberry, blackberry or dewberry crops infested by the red-necked raspberry cane-borer, according to Farmers' Bulletin 1286, by F. H. Chittenden, entomologist. The damage to these crops is caused by a flat-headed, milk-white borer, which is the larva of a small, slender, velvet-black beetle with coppery red or golden thorax ("neck"). The larvae form irregular swellings or galls, which gradually enlarge the canes and split the bark. Canes thus infested die, or become weakened and fail to develop a crop. The beetle also does some injury by feeding on the leaves of the plants.

To control the insect the infested canes should be cut out in the fall or winter, or in the early spring before the beetles have emerged from them. All cuttings should be promptly burned. To insure thoroughness, all wild blackberry, raspberry or dewberry plants nearby should receive the same attention. Co-operation among neighboring fruit growers in the observance of these measures for successive years is highly desirable.

Farmers' Bulletin 1286 may be obtained by applying to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington.

Scab Seriously Reduces Yield of Wheat Crop

Scab seriously reduces the yield of wheat in infested fields throughout the central states and eastward. And it not only affects wheat, but other grains and grasses as well. The cause of this disease is a tiny fungous parasite, which grows in the wheat plant a little like the wheat plant itself grows in the soil, and this parasite destroys the parts of the wheat plant in which it grows.

The same parasite also grows on corn, and naturally wheat following corn may be seriously affected by scab. In order to control the disease the United States Department of Agriculture recommends that the farmer—

(1) Avoid sowing wheat after corn unless the cornstalks are removed and the stubble completely plowed under.

(2) Plow under all crop refuse and clean up the old straw and grasses along the fence rows and in nearby waste places.

(3) Use clean seed of adapted varieties. Seed should be thoroughly cleaned, graded and treated.

(4) Sow wheat when the ground is cool, winter wheat on the latest date in the fall, and spring wheat on the earliest safe date in the spring.

If you are interested in making a more thorough study of the scab problem write to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., and ask for Farmers' Bulletin 1224, Wheat Scab and Its Control.

Many Injurious Insect Pests May Be Destroyed

Since many troublesome insects hibernate in dead plants and trash and in grass and weeds along the borders of cultivated land, H. A. Gossard, entomologist of the Ohio experiment station, states that large numbers of them may be destroyed in late fall or very early spring by burning the collected trash and dead grass.

Tarnished plant bugs, squash bugs, and slugs are cited as examples. These pests pass the winter in weedy borders, among refuse, under stones and other objects. They could be almost entirely eliminated if entire communities would co-operate in removing all means for their protection during winter.

Potato stalks, squash vines, onion tops, asparagus plants, bean and pea vines, and the like furnish shelter during the winter for many insects that feed upon these plants.

Fall plowing, where soil conditions permit the practice, will result in the destruction of many cutworms, white grubs, corn ear worms, army worms, and eggs of the grasshopper, where these pests are numerous.—Weekly Press Bulletin, Ohio experiment station.

Too Much Moisture Will Cause Potatoes to Decay

An excess of moisture will cause the growth of decay in the potato storage. Some growers make a practice of "curing" their potatoes before storing. This is done by piling them in piles of 30 bushels or more, and covering them with the potato vines. After the potatoes are well dried so there is no excess moisture, and are free from dirt, they may be placed in storage. Sometimes the ventilators of the storage are left open for several days after storage to facilitate drying. Care should be used, however, that potatoes in storage do not become too dry, as they may wilt or shrivel.

Right Place to Select Seed Corn Is in Field

It is a well-known fact that the best place to select seed corn is in the field. The best time to pick it is when the earliest ears are ripe. Don't wait till every ear is fully matured, as that may mean injury from frost. Besides, it is always desirable to pick from the ears that ripen first, so as to encourage early maturity.

INDIAN SNAKE DANCE IS FAKE

Hopi Ceremonial Exposed by Federal Inspector.

POISON AND FANGS REMOVED

Sad news has reached Phoenix, Ariz., that the widely celebrated snake dance of the Hopi Indians is a fraud. To be sure, there is a dance, and it is decidedly snaky, and there are ceremonials of keen interest to the whites who gather from afar.

For at least three-score years have been tales how the Indians fearlessly pursue and capture the rattlesnake and take him to their kivas, there to be associated with and adored till the time of the dance, whereat the snake priests, gathering the rattles by the double handful, and carrying the excess in their mouths, go through the ancient mystic ritual, regardless of the fangs of their deadly captives. Rattles have been seen to strike the priests on the cheek or body and hang till taken away by the attendant Antelope clan members, leaving bloody wounds. It has been told that the members of the snake clan had achieved immunity to the poison and that they possessed the formula for an antidote of which the secret never had gone beyond their own membership.

Myths Punctured.

Only this year has there been puncturing of these time-honored myths. The Indian bureau has had an inspector, E. M. Sweet, Jr., making investigations of the Hopi ceremonials. He had been getting affidavits from government employees and from the better educated Indians. Along the same line is a letter written by a young Hopi, Otto Lomavitu, who writes from Oraibi village that "the snake dance is a fake," that the snakes lose their fangs and poison before they are carried into the dance. "The white man does not know this, nor any outsider. The Indian laughs in his sleeves at the poor, deluded, pompous paleface."

The writer tells that a considerable number of the Hopi, especially among the Christianized element, no longer care for the snake dance. It has been discontinued in his home pueblo of Oraibi, and is being carried on in only a few other villages. He declares, "It is beyond my comprehension how a man of intelligence of the white man can wish that the Hopis should continue in this disgusting ceremony of holding a filthy snake in one's mouth for five or ten minutes at a time."

Indian Sustained.

The Sweet papers sustain the young Indian in his declaration that the snake dance is a "fake." A number of witnesses, one of them a former ex-high-priest of the snake clan, tell how, in the annual snake chase, all kinds of snakes are taken. When a rattler is found, the hunters hold the reptile while the fangs are raked out and the poison sacs emptied. Sometimes the larger teeth are knocked out. It is appreciated that the injuries heal quickly and that fresh venom will form within four days, so there is renewed inspection in the underground kiva before the snakes are brought out to the open kiva.

No preventive medicine is taken and the emetic, after the dance, is drunk mainly as a cleanser of the filth and slime left in the mouth and throat from the skins of the reptiles. Snake bite is feared by the priests as by the whites. Several tribal remedies for the effect of the venom are known.

It may be remembered that, early in the year, was a hue-and-cry over a circular "message" of Indian Commissioner Charles H. Burke in which recommendation was made to the Indians themselves that they discontinue some of their ceremonial dances that hardly agree with modern ethics. There was special reference to the Sioux sun dance, with its acute tortures, of the "give-away" festival, in which members of certain tribes have been wont to beggar themselves and their families, and of the dance with poisonous snakes. In the letter also was reference to the time that was wasted and a recommendation that seed time and harvest, at least, be spared for work, while there was reiteration of the oft-repeated warning against drugs and intoxicants.

Practices Immoral.

Possibly the Indian bureau's answer with respect to the Hopi is contained in the portfolio of papers gathered by Mr. Sweet. Copies of the evidence have been passed on to the Indian Rights association which now for at least once in its history is in full accord with the bureau. The association now is represented in the Southwest by S. M. Brosius. He is making inspection of the condition of southwestern Indian tribes and only incidentally is taking up the Hopi feature. Leaving the unprintable report merely as corroborative evidence, stating that neither the commissioner and his bureau nor the Indian Rights association is seeking to destroy any Indian customs of historical or ethnological value, he expresses his belief that the time has come when the Indian should be discouraged, at least in his abandonment to filthy and immoral practices that are known in the period of tribal license that is coincident with the celebration of the snake and some other dances of the southwestern pueblo-dwelling tribes.

Pueblo Dances Loathsome.

A noted scientist in 1915 wrote of Pueblo dances in New Mexico as "loathsome and repugnant." Cushing and others have written for scientific reading only, of some of the dance-practices of the Zuni. Possibly the mildest of the official comments on the Hopi dances is one by Miss Sarah E. Abbott, who lately retired after long sacrifice at Hotaville, "After twenty-two years of work among the Indians, I have, long ago, decided that most of the Katchina dances are not a place for a clean-thinking person."

Flat assertion is made within the Indian department that girls and boys, after careful instruction in morals in the boarding schools, go back to the Hopi villages to be engulfed in filthy practices and immoralities that too often accompany the dances. According to J. R. Whitwell, assistant superintendent and principal teacher of the Phoenix Indian Industrial school, "Unless we attend to the uncivilizing influences among the Indians, we might as well stop our attempts toward civilizing."—Los Angeles Times.

REUNITED AFTER 50 YEARS

Two Brothers Who Parted in England Meet at Detroit.

Fifty-two years ago two brothers said good-by to each other in a little town in the coal mining district of Cornwall, England.

"James, I believe the United States is the place for us," said William Hawkins, then twenty-seven years old. "You will do best by going there as I am to do."

"Perhaps," said James, "But I am going to try England for a while yet." "At any rate, it will be easy for you to find me in the United States when you do come," William said.

When he came to this country he went to Calumet, Mich. A few years later James came to McDonald, Pa.

But it wasn't so easy to find each other as the two brothers had imagined. Forty years went by before William learned James' address. Since then they corresponded, but never visited each other.

Recently James came to Detroit. At the station he was met by a strange man, nearly eighty years old.

"This is your brother, William," said a daughter to him. And for the first time in more than half a century the two shook hands.

ARMY GETS RUSS CAPTAIN

Former Officer for Czar Enlists to Learn English.

Private John Roberts was recruiting at South Ferry, New York, for the Sixteenth Infantry, United States army, when a slight, dark man applied with documents to show he had been wounded twice in the war and shot by foes of Kerensky and served in Wrangel's White army. Roberts hustled him to the Army building, 89 Whitehall street. He was Alexander Tchouvaldji, a captain in the Russian army under the late czar.

He was twice wounded when the original force attacked Germany. He fought under Kerensky and then under Wrangel. Then he went with his patrimony to Robert college, Constantinople.

As a linguist he was interpreter for the allied censorship office in the Balkan troubles. Finally he came here and obtained a job washing dishes in a Third street restaurant.

Figuring he could better master English in the United States army, he joined for three years.

FIND GELATIN IN SEAWEED

Plant Grows in Large Quantities on Coast of California.

New sources of food gelatin have been developed in Lower California, where great quantities of seaweed are being treated and reduced to a very clear and nearly tasteless vegetable gelatin of high quality. Consul Leighton Hope, Ensenada, informs the Department of Commerce at Washington. The weed gathered is known as gerdeum, and as many as fifteen varieties exist along the Lower California coast. It grows at varying depths from one to ten fathoms or even deeper, and always on rocks, never in sand.

It is gathered by divers working under scientific methods with air pumps and diving bells. The weed is first dried in the sun, then boiled and exposed to a freezing temperature. It is then exposed to the sun or artificial heat, the water evaporated and the gelatinous product produced.

MAN IS CLAWED BY EAGLE

Owner of Laundry Asks Police for Permit to Shoot Bird.

G. Frank Fossa, proprietor of a laundry at Nashua, N. H., was savagely attacked by a large bird, believed to be an eagle, and his face and hands were clawed, requiring the services of a physician.

Fossa was looking over a new smokestack on his laundry at the South end when the huge bird swooped from the air and beat him with its wings and clawed him about the face and hands. The day before the bird had attacked a painter who was at work on the stack and it was with difficulty that the painter beat off the bird and made his way to safety from the top of the 80-foot stack. Fossa has appealed to the police for permission to shoot the bird, which he believes to be an eagle.

JAPAN'S BUDDHA ESCAPES QUAKE

Huge Bronze Idol of Kamakura Still Intact.

IS SEVEN CENTURIES OLD

"The great bronze Buddha of Kamakura, the escape of which from damage by the recent earthquake is reported to be the subject of much rejoicing among pious Buddhists of Japan, is one of the truly wonderful statues of the world," says a bulletin from the National Geographic society.

"Huge as the statue is—fifty feet high in a sitting posture—it is faithfully proportioned and its features show a beauty and calm serenity that could hardly be excelled in a carefully modeled small image. This is seen to be an accomplishment indeed when it is realized that the eyes alone are four feet long. The eye balls are of solid gold, and a large jewel-like boss in the center of the forehead is made of a thirty-pound lump of silver.

Has Weathered Many Storms.

"The Great Buddha, or the Daibutsu as the Japanese call the image, has sat in its present position since 1252 and in its nearly seven centuries has looked out upon more than one great catastrophe. It has itself been endangered on several occasions. It was originally enclosed by a great temple structure, but this was destroyed by tidal waves in 1360 and again two years after Columbus discovered America. Since then the Titanic figure has sat unsheltered towering against its background of green trees and hills.

"The Kamakura Daibutsu, like most bronze statues, consists only of a shell of metal and is hollow inside. A passageway leads to the interior from which one may climb on ladders to the level of the shoulders and may peep out through tiny windows.

"Only in Japan can be found today a bronze statue to compare with the gigantic image at Kamakura. There is one other Daibutsu, at Nara, near Osaka, which is fifty-three feet high. This was the original colossal bronze Buddha of the islands and was cast in 749 A. D. Unlike the Kamakura statue it is still sheltered by a building.

Kamakura Once Japan's Capital.

"The Christ of the Andes on the Chile-Argentina line, one of the largest bronzes outside Japan, is 26 feet high. The Colossus of Rhodes, perhaps the best known of ancient huge bronze statues, is believed to have been 90 to 100 feet high in a standing posture. An earthquake, interestingly enough, brought about its destruction before the Christian era.

"The Daibutsu is one of the few remaining symbols of the past greatness of Kamakura, now a modest fishing village and watering place, but once the real capital of Japan. There in 1192 Minamoto Yoritomo seized the governmental power and set himself up as the first Shogun, leaving the emperor a mere puppet at Kyoto. The new capital grew rapidly and before many years had a population as great as Cleveland or St. Louis. It was burned by an invading army in 1333 but partly restored. After 1455, however, when it lost even minor government institutions, it declined rapidly.

"Kamakura is only about a dozen miles south of Yokohama across the little peninsula that helps enclose Tokyo bay on the southwest. Being thus in easy reach of Yokohama and Tokyo and the teeming plains nearby, the Great Buddha of Kamakura draws annually many thousands of pilgrims from the Buddhist portion of the population and is probably much better known than the slightly larger Daibutsu at Nara."

WATCHDOGS GET A RAISE

Ministry Concedes 10 Cents a Month Is Poor Pay.

'Tis sweet to hear the watchdog's honest bark resounding in the yards of the French arsenals, but not even a dog can live on 10 cents a month, the present state allowance.

This is the plaint of the French minister of marine. He has specified that the amount of daily indemnity to be accorded the workman or watchman entrusted with maintenance of watchdogs shall be fixed by the director of arsenals, who also will decide upon the manner of carrying out these provisions.

Huge gains in all phases of the activities of the post office will be recorded this year, since all foreign postal agencies closed on Dec. 31 last and the burden of the work these did is shifted to the Chinese post office.

AMERICA LIKELY TO PARTICIPATE

Conference On German Reparations May Soon Be Called.

OFFICIALS OBSERVE CAUTION

Spokesman For the Washington Administration Declare That Everything Depends Upon the Attitude of France—America Would Agree to Act Only In Advisory Capacity. Late Developments.

Washington, Oct. 27.—President Coolidge and Secretary Hughes observed extreme caution in commenting on the proposed American participation in a conference on German reparations.

The official viewpoint of the administration, stated by a spokesman for the president, is that everything depends upon the attitude of France. The executive desired exact information on the extent to which that government is willing to go toward accepting the judgment of a commission of experts on Germany's ability to pay, it was officially asserted.

David Lloyd George, Britain's former premier, said that he regards the European situation more hopefully than at any time since France's invasion of Germany was begun. He regards the exchange of notes between Secretary Hughes and Lord Curzon, together with the provisional acceptance by France, as indications that something soon will be done to straighten out the reparations muddle.

Senator Borah, author of the resolution which died in the last congress, calling for the appointment of an economic conference, expressed the view that the new developments in the international situation may lead to a definite settlement.

William Jennings Bryan, in an interview with Lloyd George, told the latter that he believed the way is open to the restoration of order, but that America must not surrender "one whit of its sovereignty."

In reply to inquiries at the white house as to what further steps may be taken by this government toward calling a conference, it was stated for the present that nothing further can or will be done until France's reply to the suggestions has been received and studied.

If the French reply is entirely satisfactory and contains no conditions to which the American and British government can not agree, it was stated that the next question to be decided is whether the representatives of the various governments should be selected directly by those governments or by the reparations commission. It is believed that the United States will insist upon naming her own representatives if the administration makes a decision to go into the conference. France is understood to be insisting that the examination by the experts and the entire work of the conference shall be kept wholly within the jurisdiction of the reparations commission.

The conditional acceptance by France, as reported to the state department, is not entirely satisfactory. The report made by the charge d'affaires of the French embassy is that France will agree to a conference upon two conditions, that it be under the reparations commission and that the findings of the conference shall be binding on all governments. The American note plainly stated that the United States would agree to act only in an advisory capacity and it could not become officially a participant in the reparations squabble.

Ohioans Get Medals.
Pittsburgh, Oct. 27.—Eight Ohioans were recognized by the Carnegie hero fund commission. Two of these, Harold L. Richard and Arthur Sheridan of Chillicothe, lost their lives. Fathers of the two men were given bronze medals. Others are: H. C. Heitkamp, Cincinnati; Melvin Allen, Cleveland; James R. Cecil, Martins Ferry; Alonzo Dawson, Cleveland; John J. Schoff, Dayton, and Aurelius E. Pullen, Akron.

Far East Fleet Bill Rejected.
Amsterdam, Oct. 27.—The second chamber, after three weeks of discussion, rejected by a vote of 50 to 49 the "far east fleet bill," providing for three naval bases in the Dutch East Indies and the Pacific, as well as an augmented fleet. It is believed that the government will resign as a result of the vote. The opponents of the measure argue that the cost of the fleet and the naval bases would be too great and would bring entangling engagements with other Pacific powers.

FRANK B. KELLOGG

Former Senator to Be Appointed Ambassador to England.

TO SUCCEED HARVEY

Former Senator Kellogg to Be Next Ambassador to Britain.

Washington, Oct. 27.—Frank B. Kellogg, former United States senator from Minnesota, will be the next American ambassador to Great Britain, it was learned here. President Coolidge will make the announcement as soon as certain diplomatic formalities are attended to. Great Britain must approve the appointment as a matter of courtesy, and it is understood Britain regards the appointment as acceptable. Kellogg is preparing to sail for England Nov. 11, if the appointment is formally made known by President Coolidge in time.

Mr. Kellogg is a lawyer by profession. He was a personal friend of the late President Harding. During the single term he served in the senate he devoted considerable attention to foreign affairs, was a leader of the "mild reservationists" in the Versailles treaty fight, and served as a member of the foreign relations committee. Kellogg was defeated for reelection by Hendrick Shipstead, Farmer-Labor candidate.

Get Personal Service on Ford.
Detroit, Oct. 27.—By breaking in uninvited Fred Ginski and Arthur Harker, deputy sheriffs, got personal service on Henry Ford with a subpoena, the first time such a thing has happened in years. Last May Ford was named defendant in a $100,000 suit brought by B. Frank Emery for alleged personal injuries suffered in 1919, when he was thrown from an automobile owned by Ford. Since then deputy sheriffs have tried many times to get personal service on Ford, but only to meet with defeat at the hands of the emissaries of the auto maker.

SHADE SHADES WELLS

California Welterweight Too Much For the English Boxer.

New York, Oct. 27.—"Bermudsey Billy" Wells turned out to be another England bloomer last night against Dave Shade, the California welterweight, in their 15-round bout in Madison Square garden. Wells, who was highly regarded, took 10 blows to land one. And when he endeavored to land the one, a right, Shade generally made him miss entirely or so as to make the blow of little moment. Only in the fourteenth round, when he caught Shade off balance and whipped over the right, did Wells seem to have a chance of winning. The chance quickly faded as Shade dodged off the ropes and made Wells miss so badly he went to his hands and knees. Wells took only one round, the third Shade was awarded the decision.

New London, Conn., Oct. 27.—Bound on a two-year cruise of Arctic, Arctic and Indian oceans, the three-masted schooner Blossom will leave here Monday to gather exhibits for the Cleveland museum of natural history. The ship is named for Mrs. Elizabeth Bingham Blossom of Cleveland, who is bearing the expense of the expedition.

RIOTING OCCURS AT MANY POINTS

Incidents of Another Feverish Day for Germany.

FATAL CLASHES RECORDED

Closing of Stinnes Coal Mines Brings About a Demonstration of Miners, Ending in Raids on Stores—Fresh Battles Occur in Rhineland Between Separatists and Police—Port of Hamburg Closed by Strike.

Berlin, Oct. 27.—Rioting, looting and plundering, new strikes, lockouts in the Ruhr mines, and fresh battles between separatists and police in the Rhineland, were incidents of another feverish day for Germany.

The Stinnes order closing the coal mines at Duesseldorf brought about a demonstration by more than 4,000 miners, ending in raids on stores and food shops throughout Duesseldorf. Many shots were fired and hundreds of windows were smashed by sticks and stones hurled by the jobless rioters. Many received minor injuries.

Three persons were killed and 17 wounded at Essen in riots which followed a demonstration of workers at the big Krupp works. Looting which the police were powerless to curb followed the wage riots, in which the police were bombarded by the hungry workers with chunks of burning coke. Three were killed and 20 wounded at Harburg, near Hamburg, in serious riots when the communists clashed with the police.

The Upper Silesian coal mines were tied up by a general strike.

The port strike at Hamburg has effectively closed that harbor and new riots were reported from various sections of the city. Many steamers were turned back without unloading, including the big Cunarder Manchuria, which had more than 7,000 tons of foodstuffs for Germany.

In the Rhineland the French and Belgian troops maintained an attitude of neutrality, although the population were strictly forbidden to use firearms against the separatists, while the latter remained mysteriously armed.

There was serious fighting at Duisburg. The separatists seized the municipal buildings Thursday and strong attempts were made today to dislodge them. There were several casualties. The separatists were ejected from the city hall at Bonn when the place was stormed by the police. There were clashes between the separatists at Coblenz and the separatists divested a large number of the German police of their uniforms. Dressing themselves in the seized garments they mingled with the crowds in the streets, causing much confusion.

FORBES DENIES ALL CHARGES OF GRAFT

Veterans' Bureau May Be Placed Under Cabinet Officer.

Washington, Oct. 27.—There were interesting developments in the case involving the administration of former Director Charles R. Forbes of the veterans' bureau.

Announcement was made that the senate investigating committee will recommend that the veterans' bureau be placed under the direct control of a cabinet officer. Forbes issued a statement denying in full all charges of graft and corruption placed against him before the senate committee.

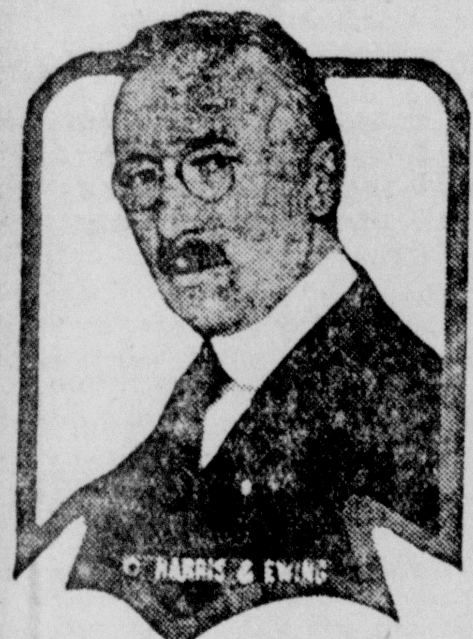

E. L. Morse, who has been subpoenaed from Excelsior Springs, Mo., to testify concerning the sale of property he owned to the bureau for hospital purposes arrived here, ready to take the stand. Department of justice agents continued their probe of Forbes administration.

Matthew O'Brien, San Francisco architect, who was paid $64,000 for drawing plans that were never used for the Livermore (Cal.) hospital, was subpoenaed to testify before the committee.

The senate committee will urge and insist that the bureau, which is now functioning independently of other government departments, be placed under the supervision of a cabinet officer, Chairman David A. Reed of Pennsylvania announced. "A government bureau which is spending nearly $500,000,000 annually should certainly have the careful supervision of a cabinet officer or given the status of a department itself." Senator Reed declared. It is known that President Coolidge is favorable to such a plan.

Columbus, Oct. 27.—In a brief statement issued here, Federal Prohibition Commissioner Roy A. Haynes indicated he would not be a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor of Ohio. WALTON TRIAL OPENS THURSDAY

Suspended Governor Faces Many Impeachment Charges.

SENATE SETS HEARING DATE

Oklahoma Legislature to Begin an Investigation of Charges Against the Ku Klux Klan—Grand Jury to Be Summoned For the Same Purpose In Each County of the State. Walton to Answer Accusers.

Oklahoma City, Oct. 27.—Trial of J. C. Walton, suspended governor of Oklahoma, on 22 impeachment allegations will commence at 10 o'clock next Thursday morning. Meantime other articles may be filed against him by an inquisitorial committee of the house of representatives.

While Walton is answering his accusers and the machinery under control of the house and senate will be started moving in an investigation of charges against the Ku Klux Klan, a grand jury will be summoned in each county of the state, and all the powers of law enforcement will be set to work to get at the truth regarding the Klan activities and the order's alleged influence over local officials, who also will be investigated.

"Waltonism will be stamped out," said Speaker W. D. McBeck of the house. "Then we'll go straight down the line to the most remote corners of the state. Walton was not sincere about this, but we are."

A joint resolution demanding the Klan's investigation was passed by the senate and a committee appointed. The house already had adopted the measure and the speaker named a committee of three, "two of whom," he announced, "are not members of the Klan, the third being a Catholic." This matter being amended, the house proceeded to impeach Walton on the final count, a general charge of incompetence. All charges then were compiled and the house board of seven managers presented them to the senate, which immediately resolved into a court of impeachment presided over by Chief Justice Johnson of the supreme court and whose members were sworn by him to give the accused an impartial hearing and to deal justly.

The charges were consolidated in the senatorial court, to permit of only one process being served, but each will be tried and decided on its individual merits. The impeachment court then set the hour of trial and directed that a summons and certified copy of the impeachment articles be served upon the former chief executive.

MOVE TO UNSEAT MAYFIELD

Ku Klux Klan Issue to Be Brought Before Federal Senate.

Fort Worth, Tex., Oct. 27.—The Ku Klux Klan issue is to be brought before the United States senate during the next session of congress. This was made virtually certain in the open movement to unseat Earle B. Mayfield, the Texas senator, accused of being prominently identified with the Klan. The situation is developing in such a way as to give anxiety to a number of senators from states in which the hooded organization has developed great strength.

The Mayfield case, in the opinion of those who are familiar with the evidence, which is to be submitted to the senate committee on privileges and elections, is destined to create great interest. It will be submitted by Bailey, Nichols and Bailey of Dallas, who will direct the fight to unseat Mayfield. These attorneys will place before the country what is declared to be irrefutable evidence of how the Klan works when it sets out to elect one of the hooded brothers to high office. Some of the charges already outlined involve alleged intimidation of voters, the taking over of the election machinery in important counties by the Klan and the spending of a vast sum of money.

Plead Guilty in Rum Plot.

Wheeling, W. Va., Oct. 27.—Fred Fuller of Columbus, alleged originator of the $2,000,000 Hermitage (Teun) alcohol plot, and William Schultz of Wheeling on trial for conspiracy to violate the national prohibition laws, reversed their pleas of not guilty to guilty. Sentence was deferred. Four co-defendants have indicated their intention to combat the federal indictment to a jury verdict.

FAVORS BUDGET SYSTEM

Senator Borah Says It Would Curb Extravagance.

Washington, Oct. 27.—Senator Borah of Idaho declared here that he was thoroughly in sympathy with the budget system and believed that it ought to be respected and maintained. "There is no governmental evil more menacing just now," he said, "than that of extravagance or the waste of public funds. The budget system is designed to and, if carried out will, effectuate economy in public expenditures, and will save the taxpayers millions and millions of dollars. It is not likely, however, that we shall be able to maintain our national budget system unless public opinion is thoroughly informed and aroused to its defense. At the last session of congress, for example, the budget recommended an appropriation of $27,000,000 for rivers and harbors work; but congress disregarded this recommendation and appropriated $56,000,000.

"There are numerous other instances of this sort that could be cited but we ought, nevertheless, to undertake to restore the budget system and preserve it for the orderly and businesslike administration of government finances."

Passion Players Coming.

Berlin, Oct. 27.—Dire poverty has forced the villagers of Oberammergau to break with long tradition and is driving the Passion Players out into the materialistic world to earn bread. Anton Lang, famous for his role as Christ, together with a dozen others, will start for America in about a fortnight to open a small pottery and wood carving exhibit in New York. They are going to America for the purpose of earning money for Oberammergau in order that the Passion Play might again be given on time.

CANCELLATION OF DEBTS

France Would Have United States Consider Proposition.

Paris, Oct. 27.—France is perfectly willing to allow a commission of experts, including Americans, to assemble to "discuss" the reparations problem, but France will refuse to take any part in any international conference such as is proposed by Secretary Hughes and Premier Baldwin, unless the United States and Britain expressly declare beforehand that they are ready to consider cancellation of, or at least a large reduction in, inter-allied debts.

Thus it is increasingly evident that France is playing her German claims as a card in the game for the cancellation of her war debts. France reasons that if England and America see Germany breaking up and ruin menacing Europe, they will be forced to retrace their steps and admit the cancellation of debts. This now looks as the underlying reason for the French policy toward Germany.

Shoe Man Dead.

Cincinnati, Oct. 27.—Lawrence B. Cahill, president of the Cahill Shoe company, this city, died at his home after a long illness. He was 64 years old.

CHORUS.
If your heart keeps right, If your heart keeps right, There's a song of glad-ness in the dark-est night; If your heart keeps right, If your heart keeps right, Ev-ry cloud will wear a rain-bow, If your heart keeps right.

In Pittsburgh this song seemed fairly to permeate the life of the city. Boys whistled it on the streets, women sang it at their housework and staid business men hummed it in their offices. In the great steel plants vaguely, in the midst of the roar of machinery, you could hear men singing. "If Your Heart Keeps Right." The degree and extent to which the song permeated all the different strata of life were really surprising even to us, who had grown accustomed to its power.

The particular story I have in mind was told to me when I was invited to the Shadyside Presbyterian church, one of the wealthiest and most fashionable of that city of many wonderful churches. The audience was made up of the aristocracy of the city, but they seemed intensely interested in hearing me tell some of the stories of our songs and their results.

I spoke too, about the relationship of the songs to our campaign, in general, and of the great work for God which had been accomplished by them. When I had finished, a very fine looking, sweet faced woman, in a gown, whose quiet elegance told of her good taste and position, approached me and said, "I have a confession to make."

"When the Sunday campaign first started and I heard your song 'If Your Heart Keeps Right,' I was really disgusted. It seemed to me that it was silly, cheap twaddle. I know that those are extreme words, but I told you that it was a confession I had to make and that is it. So I will not hide the fact that I disliked some of your songs, and that this song in particular offended what I chose to call my fastidious musical taste. It really grated on my nerves and besides, I considered that it was not at all in keeping with the dignity of a religious campaign."

"But, you see, I did not understand. I was viewing that song from a narrow biased standpoint."

"You know that I have always been interested in the deserving poor—so that sometimes employers with whom I am acquainted ask me to see to some special cases for them. It happened that the head of a great steel corporation asked me to call on the wife of a man who had been hurt in the mill and investigate the real facts."

"The street to which I was directed was quite unfamiliar to me and, as a part of my confession, I must add that I was frightened when I saw the rough district thru which the street car was taking me.

"The point for which I was bound seemed the worst of all and I found that I would have to go over a hill to reach the address I was looking for. There were some rough looking men hanging about, and I was growing more and more nervous."

"I could not find the number of Bill Jones' house—the man who was hurt. There was no one, apparently, to aid me except the men, that I felt were surveying me with glowering looks."

"I screwed up my courage at last, turned back, and with my heart beating rapidly, I went up to one of them and asked if he knew where Bill Jones lived."

"I was never so surprised in my life. The man at once removed his cap and smiled. He said that he knew the house, and would walk there with me. The rest of the men also smiled at me, and I was suddenly ashamed of my fears of them. We walked along as pleasantly as though we were old friends and finally he asked me:

"Lady, have you been down to the tabernacle yet?"

"I was surprised. Someway or other you know, in looking over the vast crowd which filled the tabernacle, it had not occurred to me to think that men like these had been there."

"I was still more surprised when my new friend said:

"Well, that place has made a great change in some of us fellows over here."

"I asked him to tell me about it, and after speaking of various cases he said that he supposed I would be most interested in hearing about Bill Jones, so he went on:

"Well, Bill was always a good fellow. Meant well, you know, but the trouble was he couldn't keep away from the drink. He had a nice little wife and a baby and every once in a while he would promise that now he was going to stop for good but the first thing we knew, he would be at work, swearing at everyone, with whisky on his breath."

"Then, one night, he went down to the tabernacle, I guess his wife got him to go. Anyway, before long a lot of us had taken our stand for Christ, and along with us, Bill. He was a changed man. Before he was hurt and taken away to the hospital, you could hear him, most any time, hummin' some of the songs they sing down there. 'If Your Heart Keeps Right' was his favorite and I guess it is the favorite of most of us."

"Right there was where I felt as if I ought to beg his pardon for the thoughts I had held about that song. 'But just then we came to the plain little cottage where he said Bill lived so we shook hands, with hearty good will and parted."

"I had to climb down some very rickety steps for the poor place was below the level of the street, and as I did so I heard some one singing. 'Every cloud will wear a rainbow if your heart keeps right.' I walked quietly to the door and looked into a very neat, clean room, but oh, so poorly furnished. There was a woman in it, sitting in the only rocking chair and on her lap there lay a very frail 'wan baby."

"She had one of the tabernacle song books open. I recognized it at once, and I think I was not surprised when her clear, true voice kept on with the words of the very song which I had so disliked. But now it brought tears to my eyes. For she was very pale and worn and shabby—a weak little woman, with big tender eyes and she looked into a distant corner of the room as if she had her attention fixed on a pleasant vision, while she sang:

"She saw me before she was quite thru with the verse, but she kept on as she smiled and held out her hand."

"Altho she was so poor, there was a quiet self possession about her which comes from self respecting womanhood. I told her that her husband's employer had sent me to see if there was anything she needed. She said that her great worry was not having enough money—at least, money that she could spare—to go over to the hospital to see her husband. She wanted to visit him very much."

"I told her I thought that could be arranged. And then I asked her if she liked the song she had been singing. You should have seen her face light up."

"Oh, yes, indeed, she loved it! She had found such a lot of comfort out of the tabernacle songs, especially this one."

"Then I asked her some casual questions, and she began to talk about the different songs, in the course of which she told me something which I think is the most affecting and touching tribute to the songs that I have ever heard. That song book was the only one in the whole neighborhood. They were all very poor in the district. So the neighbor who had been able to buy the solitary song book loaned it out first to one family and then another, so that all might learn to sing the songs. This was Mrs. Jones' 'day' for the book."

"She gave me a wonderful smile as she said at the end that, altho things looked blue and discouraging, she believed in the promise of the rainbow over the clouds 'if your heart keeps right.'"

All thru the simple, affecting telling of that story you could see tears and smiles sweeping across the faces of the splendid women, who listened with such strained attention. There was a little pause as the speaker stopped to regain her composure and then she turned to me and said:

"I want to apologize for what I thought, and said about that song. I think, now, that it is one of the most beautiful I know. Any song which can bring joy and happiness to a whole whole neighborhood as that has done, merits the consideration and the help of those who may not need it in the same way."

Of course, we sang the chorus of "If Your Heart Keeps Right." Then we closed the meeting and those wealthy women flocked around her who had told the story. As they did so I saw that most of them had money concealed in their fingers, which they slipped to her as secretly as they could."

So I was sure that material prosperity would be added to that other and greater happiness which the little woman in the cottage had found."

HIGH TOPS WITCH

"DEED it is a witch, Mr. King, sir," I done seen with my own eyes. Last night when we was in the cabin playing cards something brushed past the window. Sam, he says, 'I bet that's High Top's witch.' Which? I asks, and Sam tells us. She roams the mountains, and its bad luck for the man that sees or tries to catch her. Joe, he once give chase, when the witch come prowlin' around the messhouse, and she throws a laugh at him and gets quick behind a tree, and when Joe looked all about she wasn't there; an' next day Joe lost his job, diggin' on High Top."

"Glen King laughed, but the golden-haired child on his knee warned:

"It is true what Jim says. I saw the witch one evening just as I was going off to sleep. Sister Monna had tucked me into bed and kissed me good-night. She threw a rose from the edge right through my window and into my bed—and first she kissed the rose—so I wasn't afraid at all. Maybe its only bad men that she punishes. Mr. King; Joe was a bad nigger, Mary Murphy says. He gambled money and took all poor Tim Murphy had."

"Information bureau." Glen King remarked, and pinched the little girl's cheek.

"So you have seen the witch, and are not afraid of her, Angel—and Monna says that red roses mean love?" Glen King was quite untutored in the ways of John Kirkwood's daughter. And the chief engineer was.

Glen was torn with jealousy at times by the sight of Monna, walking the sweet mountain trails at the side of Bob Whitely. Bob, a New Yorker like himself, had come with the engineering commission, as secretary to Mr. Kirkwood, and Glen could not get over his dislike and suspicion regarding the ingratiating stranger. Monna appeared not to share this dislike. Sighing now, he put the child down from his knee and left the cabin; Angel walked at his side.

"And if you don't believe in the witch, Mr. King," she continued her favorite topic, "you just watch for her some evening on High Top."

Glen sat long in the moonlight at his cabin door that night; Jim, as usual was absent. As he sat across the moon-lit path fled a shadow. He got to his feet, interested—the witch, beyond a doubt. He saw a dark enveloping cape, a peaked hood rolled low.

The witch eluded him; but moonlight showed a touch of scarlet lining, where the person's arm had tightened for a moment the cape about her—or him.

Next day Glen King astonishingly received notice that his services on the great engineering commission were dispensed with. When he sought out his chief John Kirkwood received him coldly.

"This grieves me more than that it can possibly grieve you," he said. "If I had not undoubted authority, I would not find it possible to believe you guilty of the very fault you have apparently been eager to help me to subdue. You were an active gambler at last night's disgraceful meeting on High Top."

Stunned, indignant, Glen King spoke but one word. "Mistaken," he said brusquely, and went to pack his things.

Black Jim brought him coffee. "Dat rascal call himself Bob Whitely, tell Mr. Kirkwood lies 'bout you, Mr. King," Jim said. "Pretendin' to look up the gamblers when he's one of 'em. Dressed up like you last night. Went to the whites' cabin. Got out so no one could catch him, an' den made the detective believe it was yo'self. I know it. An' it's Miss Monna Kirkwood that rascal wants, an' maybe'll get her, on account of his smooth ways."

"But to think," Glen murmured broodingly, "that after all our association Mr. Kirkwood would disbelieve in me—"

"Dat Bob," Jim confirmed, "is mighty smooth, Mr. King." Glen bowed his head in his hand—toward him a slender figure came. The negro fiew. "The witch!" the disheartened man heard him cry. Glen raised his head. Monna stood before him. A dark cape wrapped about her, its lining showed scarlet. She held out to him a wide black ribbon. "The peaked hood," she said and smiled.

"I have been High Top witch, Glen," she came to sit beside him. "After Angel was put to bed for the night I roamed the Top; really it was fun, but I had an object. Bob Whitely had whispered things about you—had insinuated to father. I had to know, so, I peeked in the cabin windows where games were played. How did I know where to go? I followed Mary Murphy's Tim one night, secretly. She had bewailed the fact of his nightly visits. And last night, Glen, I saw through a cabin door, left open but for a moment to admit a man—that man dressed as you might be dressed—but it was not you. I have told my father who the man was. And here I saw you, solitary, on your own doorstep—until you went in to bar for the night your cabin door. I have told my father that, too. Tomorrow it will be Bob Whitely who will leave the High Top commissary—and not you, my Glen, dear!"

His long arm was around the slender figure in the dark cape.

"It was love for you all along," said Monna.

SAIL OVER THE MOUNTAINS

Few Persons Know Ocean Liners Actually Travel Over Submarine Peaks.

The main features of some parts of the bottom of the sea are, in many instances, as familiar to scientists as are those of the land on which we live, although no complete maps of the ocean bed have as yet been made.

Of the oceans, the Atlantic has been more thoroughly surveyed than any other.

Probably not one in a thousand persons who traverse the Atlantic knows that at various stages of the trip liners actually sail over mountains. Fewer still realize that in some instances the peaks of these mountains are almost uncomfortably close to the surface.

The biggest of these submarine mountains is known to science as Mt. Laura Ethel. It lies roughly midway between Liverpool and New York, and is at least 12,000 feet in height, its summit being less than 100 feet from the surface.

Another mountain, Piacentia, in the South Atlantic, is almost an island, for its peak is less than 20 feet from the surface.

The Faraday hills, in the North Atlantic, have been the subject of much exploration by means of soundings. Recent investigations show that the currents have deposited at the base of the biggest of the group the wreckage of over 5,000 vessels of all kinds.

It seems, therefore, that the distinction of being the real "Davy Jones' Locker" can with good reason be ascribed, as it has been, to this eerie under-sea locality.

NET IS USED TO GUARD LIGHTHOUSE FROM BIRDS

Ducks, Gulls and Songsters Meet Death While Seeking Haven at St. Simond's Light.

Like the candle that attracts the moths the lighthouse on St. Simonds Island, just off the coast of southern Georgia attracts thousands of birds. It has become necessary for the government to erect a large steel net around the glass in the top of the tower to save the windows from further injury and to protect the light and its powerful lens from possible destruction.

The light is of 2,200-candle power and is in a tower 104 feet high. It is visible on a clear night for a distance of sixteen miles, and according to C. O. Svenson, keeper of the lighthouse, offers as much fascination to the fowls of the air as the white lights of Broadway offer to the thousands of Americans who annually visit New York.

"During the migrating season thousands of birds fly into the net," Keeper Svenson said, "and on a dark and stormy night the net is worked overtime. Then the birds believe the light offers them a haven from the wind, but instead it lures many of them to their death."

"The lighthouse does not observe any of the game laws, but gets all the birds that come toward it. Quite often I pick up birds of rare plumage. Quite often the birds are killed outright, but some of them escape death and are either badly stunned or suffer broken wings. These I kill to end their suffering, and feel that in doing so I am showing them mercy."

"Ducks, rice birds, quail and doves often fly into the net and after day-break I gather them up, dress them and they are soon on my dining table."

H. C. Hopkins, the taxidermist, has mounted a large variety of specimens and a visit to his home gives the impression of having walked into a bird convention.

"The lighthouse is to blame for many of the birds here," Mr. Hopkins explained.

"One morning Mr. Hopkins classified the birds picked up and in this collection were Maryland yellow throats, black and white warbler, black throated blue warbler, American red start, parula warbler, iron bird, water thrush, yellow billed cuckoo, yellow warblers, black crowned night heron gulls of every variety, cat birds, Connecticut warblers, owls of several different varieties and several varieties of ducks."

Finder of Bill Discovers Honesty Not So Uncommon.

City Clerk Mansfield of Northampton, Mass., is firmly convinced that there are still honest folks around in the world. Recently Mr. Mansfield and a party of friends motored to Springfield and parked in front of a theater. As Mr. Mansfield left his car he saw a new and crisp $20 bill on the sidewalk and promptly picked it up. The hour was just before the beginning of the performance and the street was crowded, but the finder decided that the money must have been dropped by a party of people who had got out of a big car just as it reached the curb.

Walking into the lobby, he presented the bill to one of the women who expressed the opinion that some of her friends might have lost it. Mr. Mansfield left his address with the woman and several nights later received a letter containing a check for $20 and explaining that a checking up among the people had revealed that the money must have been lost by someone else.

CARBON EXPLODES

Jerome Warner Had Narrow Escape—Auto is a Complete Wreck.

A can of carbon bisulphide nearly cost the life of Jerome Warner Friday afternoon. He had been troubled by his wheat heating and thought the source of the trouble was weevil in the grain. He came to town and secured a gallon of the carbon bisulphide and placed it in his closed car and started homeward. When near the home of Jacob Glick the contents of the can became warmed up and exploded. The fumes were ignited by sparks of the autos and in a moment the interior of the car was a mass of flames. Mr. Warner, with some difficulty made his escape, but not before his mustache, eyebrows and hair was badly singed. The car is a complete wreck. The metal parts and the glass in the frame were melted by the intense heat. Mr. Warner carried no insurance on the car.

"Kelly," said the Hotel Stenographer, "I am not old enough yet to enjoy having anybody call me 'Kid,' so can that stuff, if you hope to sit in the same hammock with me."

"Neither am I kid enough to think that the woman who marries the successful business man is going to be the happiest married lady that is. Not many women are willing to swap a husband for a snappy roadster of their own. Most women who get married do it, not for money but for a home. A home without a husband is like egg nog with the nog left out."

"When a guy leans up against a payroll, his work stops when the whistle blows. He has time to be husband and a father. A girl, who hooks up with an ambitious young business man, generally finds herself playing second fiddle to the business. Her husband is either downtown, meeting a man, or walking the floor wondering how he is going to meet that note."

"There never was a wife who really believed her husband was going down town at night to meet a man. No matter how true it is, she can never see any reason why business cannot be done during business hours. When he says he is going downtown to put thru a business deal, she is sure that there is something about it he does not want her to know."

"No woman is happy when her husband has any secrets from her. If he tells her about his business, she is unhappy because he will not take her advice."

"Then there ain't no woman who is happy?" asked Kelly.

"Not unless her husband is working for a salary and leaves his work at the office," replied the girl.

Not Notified of Election.
A singular omission in the matter of legal formalities is the failure of the laws of the United States to provide for notifying a President-elect of his election. The result of the electoral vote is recorded in the journals of both houses of congress, but it is left for the President-elect to find out the result in whatever way he can, and to present himself for inauguration on the next succeeding fourth day of March.

CITES CONDITIONS

French Premier's Note to Britain Dispatched From Paris.

London, Oct. 27.—It is learned that Premier Poincare's note to Lord Curzon, in reply to the expressed wish of Premier Baldwin regarding a reparations conference, has been dispatched from Paris. It is stated that the note is a strictly qualified acceptance of the expert commission plan originally proposed by Secretary Hughes.

It is learned that the points of the note include the following: No neutral or German representatives to be invited; the commission not to function until France is satisfied that passive resistance has completely ceased and reparations in kind are delivered on the scale as in January last, and that the commission does not take upon itself to recommend a reduction in the total indemnity.

The note further intimates that Premier Poincare will not agree to any reduction in the French claim of 26 milliards of gold marks as the French share of reparations.

 * * *  SOCIAL CALENDAR ***

Mrs. E. L. Tolbert very delightfully entertained the members of the Woman's Home Missionary society and their friends at her home on Walnut street, Thursday afternoon. About fifty ladies were present. The hostess, who is president of the society, conducted the regular business meeting, after which Mrs. Carl Ritz, with her usual ability, presented the opening chapter of the Study Book, her subject being "The Child—America's Greatest Asset." A piano solo by James Furgason was greatly appreciated. Dainty refreshments, served by the hostess and her committee, added to the sociability of the occasion.

DUE TO BREAKDOWN

Doctor Steinmetz, Electric Wizard, Died of Exhaustion.

Schenectady, N. Y., Oct. 27.—The death of Dr. Charles P. Steinmetz, master electrician, who passed away at his home here, was due to physical exhaustion, resulting from a long lecture tour in the west. Dr. Steinmetz was a native of Germany and was 58 years old. He was known as the wizard who snatched lightning from the skies and made the thunderbolt do his bidding. The doctor's career had its beginning in New York in 1839, where, penniless and able to speak but very little English, he arrived from Zurich, Switzerland. He was chief consulting engineer of the General Electrical company.

AMUSEMENTS

A photoplay based on the play which a few years ago was one of the hits of Broadway is "Success" scheduled for presentation on Monday at the Met theater with Brandon Tynan the stage star in the role which he originally created in the spoken story and the excellence of the cast play. The dramatic interest in the which interprets the various roles should make the presentation a distinct hit.

"Success" is a story of the theater, but unlike many of the type, this is said to have been written by persons familiar with the intimate details of life behind the footlights. Its authors have managed to capture the spirit and atmosphere of the playhouse, and the characters which they have introduced are all faithful, actual types.

In addition to Mr. Tynan, the cast includes the delightful screen actress, Mary Astor, as the talented daughter; Naomi Childers as the mother; and Dore Davidson, Lionel Adams, Stanley Ridges, Robert Lee Keeling, Billy Quirk and others. The photoplay is presented by Murray W. Garsson, and released by Metro Pictures Corporation. It is a Ralph Ince production, written and adapted by Adeline Lefzbach and Theodore A. Liebler Jr. George V. Hobart wrote the titles.

THAT DISAGREEABLE CHATTER

Unless properly oiled the transmission bands on Ford cars cause a disagreeable chatter, especially at this time of year. This can be entirely eliminated by the use of Warco motor oil which we have sold for the last three years and which our customers tell us is the best oil they have ever put into a Ford car. Our crank case service costs you nothing, you pay only for the oil used.

The Curfew Bell.

The curfew bell formerly was rung in England, at sunset in summer and at 8 o'clock in winter—the object of which was to warn the people to cover up their fires, extinguish their lamps and candles and retire to rest. The custom is a Norman one, and is said to have been introduced into England by William the Conqueror in 1068, as a precaution against fires in the days of chimneyless wooden houses. This enactment was repealed in the reign of Henry I, in 1100. There is a good reason, however, for believing that a similar custom existed in England in the days of Alfred the Great (871-901), and William the Conqueror merely ordained that it should be universally observed, and that penalties should be imposed upon those that neglected to attend to the signal. The Puritans introduced the custom into New England, and Longfellow speaks, in the Bells of Lynn, of the "curfew of the setting sun" as heard at Nahant.

Power in Kilowatt-Hour.

The following figures, compiled by French officials, are worth attention: One kilowatt-hour of electrical energy will drive a sewing machine for 20 hours; clean 15 steel table knives for a year; clip 5 horses or 25 sheep; heat water for shaving for one month; light 3 cigars a day for 5 years; heat a flat-iron for 3 hours; boil 237 gallons of water; fry 15 chops in 15 minutes; heat a curling iron for 20 mornings; incubate 250 eggs; milk 20 cows; separate 350 gallons of milk; churn 440 pounds of butter; chop half a ton of straw. Assuming these items to be approximately correct, one-third should be added to each in computing the work of a horsepower-hour.—Compressed Air Magazine.

"Roland for an Oliver."

The expression, "A Roland for an Oliver," meaning a retort for retort, or the matching of one incredible lie with another, is derived from the fanciful tales told by the old chroniclers concerning the marvelous deeds of Roland and Oliver, the two most famous of the twelve paladins of Charlemagne, says the Detroit News. These remarkable heroes were so evenly matched that neither was able to surpass the other; and accordingly, to test their relative superiority, they met in single combat and fought for five successive days on an island in the Rhine, without either gaining the least advantage over the other.

Right to His Teeth.

After a row with his dentist, Hoff declared that he would have something to say to that gentleman. The boys at the club would not think Hoff would have the nerve. When he came in a week later they were not backward in putting the question direct: "So you told the dentist what you thought of him?" "Said it to his teeth," he answered firmly. "When?" they asked. "Yesterday afternoon." "He was out of town yesterday afternoon," Hoff was not disconcerted at this. "I told you I said it to his teeth."—Baltimore News.

A Gold-Plated Carriage.

Historians agree that the most valuable carriage in the world is one found in the palace of the Trianon at Versailles, that was built for Charles X of France, and under instructions to spare no pains or cost in making it fit for the regal and rather bizarre tastes that prevailed in those days, so from the tip of the pole to the hind wheels the carriage is plated with heavy gold decorations, the cost of construction then being in excess of $200,000. Today it would be many times that sum.

Gloaming.

The gloaming came, silverly. The dew glistened on the fronds of the ferns, in the cups of the moss. The stars emerged delicately, as the eyes of fawns shining through the green gloom of the forest. . . . A cool green freshness came into the air. The stars were as wind-whirled fruit blown upward from the tree-tops. The moon, full-orbed and with a pulse of flame, laid a tide of soft light across the brown shores of the world. . . . —Flona Macleod.

Poison Ivy.

Although poison ivy is one of the worst offenders it frequently is blamed for poisoning caused by other plants. The Department of Agriculture has a list of more than 100 of such plants that grow in this country, and it is probable that there are others that may be poisonous to some persons. Not all of these plants are equally poisonous, and, too, there is great variation in the susceptibility of persons.—Scientific American.

Right-Handedness.

Of two pay telephones in a shop, the one on the right side took four times as much money as the one on the left. This curious influence of the dominant side of the body was lately demonstrated by evidence that speakers before a large audience have a tendency to address the right-hand side if the speaker happens to be left-handed. The same unconscious tendency may be seen in the schoolroom.

Before the Stars and Stripes.

The flag which the colonies all used before the Stars and Stripes was adopted was variously known as the congress colors, the grand union flag, and the first navy ensign. It consisted of 13 stripes, alternately red and white, typifying the 13 colonies, with a union bearing the crosses of St. George and St. Andrew combined—the national flag of Great Britain—signifying the mother country.

Waking Sleep-Walkers.

Some sleep-walkers may be awakened by being gently touched or called; others by a flash of light, or by stumbling in their wanderings, or by setting their feet in water. Others remain so heavily asleep that it is necessary to shake them vigorously before they show signs of waking. But sometimes it is not wise to wake the sleep-walker at all, and there have been cases where sudden rousings have proved fatal.

Fall or Winter Best Time to Fight Borer

Canes Infested Should Be Cut Before Bugs Emerge.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
Fall or winter is the best time to apply control measures to raspberry, blackberry or dewberry crops infested by the red-necked raspberry cane-borer, according to Farmers' Bulletin 1286, by F. H. Chittenden, entomologist. The damage to these crops is caused by a flat-headed, milk-white borer, which is the larva of a small, slender, velvet-black beetle with copper red or golden thorax ("neck"). The larvae form irregular swellings or galls, which gradually enlarge the canes and split the bark. Canes thus infested die, or become weakened and fail to develop a crop. The beetle also does some injury by feeding on the leaves of the plants.

To control the insect the infested canes should be cut out in the fall or winter, or in the early spring before the beetles have emerged from them. All cuttings should be promptly burned. To insure thoroughness, all wild blackberry, raspberry or dewberry plants nearby should receive the same attention. Co-operation among neighboring fruit growers in the observance of these measures for successive years is highly desirable.

Farmers' Bulletin 1286 may be obtained by applying to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington.

Scab Seriously Reduces Yield of Wheat Crop

Scab seriously reduces the yield of wheat in infested fields throughout the central states and eastward. And it not only affects wheat, but other grains and grasses as well. The cause of this disease is a tiny fungus parasite, which grows in the wheat plant a little like the wheat plant itself grows in the soil, and this parasite destroys the parts of the wheat plant in which it grows.

The same parasite also grows on corn, and naturally wheat following corn may be seriously affected by scab. In order to control the disease the United States Department of Agriculture recommends that the farmer—

(1) Avoid sowing wheat after corn unless the cornstalks are removed and the stubble completely plowed under.
(2) Plow under all crop refuse and clean up the old straw and grasses along the fence rows and in nearby waste places.

(3) Use clean seed of adapted varieties. Seed should be thoroughly cleaned, graded and treated.
(4) Sow wheat when the ground is cool, winter wheat on the latest date in the fall, and spring wheat on the earliest safe date in the spring.

If you are interested in making a more thorough study of the scab problem write to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., and ask for Farmers' Bulletin 1224, Wheat Scab and Its Control.

Many Injurious Insect Pests May Be Destroyed

Since many troublesome insects hibernate in dead plants and trash and in grass and weeds along the borders of cultivated land, H. A. Gossard, entomologist of the Ohio experiment station, states that large numbers of them may be destroyed in late fall or very early spring by burning the collected trash and dead grass.

Tarnished plant bugs, squash bugs, and slugs are cited as examples. These pests pass the winter in weedy borders, among refuse, under stones and other objects. They could be almost entirely eliminated if entire communities would co-operate in removing all means for their protection during winter.

Potato stalks, squash vines, onion tops, asparagus plants, bean and pea vines, and the like furnish shelter during the winter for many insects that feed upon these plants.

Fall plowing, where soil conditions permit the practice, will result in the destruction of many cutworms, white grubs, corn ear worms, army worms, and eggs of the grasshopper, where these pests are numerous.—Weekly Press Bulletin, Ohio experiment station.

Too Much Moisture Will Cause Potatoes to Decay

An excess of moisture will cause the growth of decay in the potato storage. Some growers make a practice of "curing" their potatoes before storing. This is done by piling them in piles of 30 bushels or more, and covering them with the potato vines. After the potatoes are well dried so there is no excess moisture, and are free from dirt, they may be placed in storage. Sometimes the ventilators of the storage are left open for several days after storage to facilitate drying. Care should be used, however, that potatoes in storage do not become too dry, as they may wilt or shrivel.

Right Place to Select Seed Corn Is in Field

It is a well-known fact that the best place to select seed corn is in the field. The best time to pick it is when the earliest ears are ripe. Don't wait till every ear is fully matured, as that may mean injury from frost. Besides, it is always desirable to pick from the ears that ripen first, so as to encourage early maturity.

INDIAN SNAKE DANCE IS FAKE

Hopi Ceremonial Exposed by Federal Inspector.

POISON AND FANGS REMOVED

Sad news has reached Phoenix, Ariz., that the widely celebrated snake dance of the Hopi Indians is a fraud. To be sure, there is a dance, and it is decidedly snakey, and there are ceremonials of keen interest to the whites who gather from afar.

For at least three-score years have been tales how the Indians fearlessly pursue and capture the rattlesnake and take him to their kivas, there to be associated with and adored till the time of the dance, whereat the snake priests, gathering the rattles by the double handful, and carrying the excess in their mouths, go through the ancient mystic ritual, regardless of the fangs of their deadly captives. Rattles have been seen to strike the priests on the cheek or body and hang till taken away by the attendant Atlatlo clan members, leaving bloody wounds. It has been told that the members of the snake clan had achieved immunity to the poison and that they possessed the formula for an antidote of which the secret never had gone beyond their own membership.

Myths Punctured.

Only this year has there been puncturing of these time-honored myths. The Indian bureau has had an inspector, E. M. Sweet, Jr., making investigations of the Hopi ceremonials. He had been getting affidavits from government employees and from the better educated Indians. Along the same line is a letter written by a young Hopi, Otto Lomavitu, who writes from Oraibi village that "the snake dance is a fake," that the snakes lose their fangs and poison before they are carried into the dance. "The white man does not know this, nor any outsider. The Indian laughs in his sleeves at the poor, deluded, pompous paleface." The writer tells that a considerable number of the Hopi, especially among the Christianized element, no longer care for the snake dance. It has been discontinued in his home pueblo of Oraibi, and is being carried on in only a few other villages. He declares, "It is beyond my comprehension how a man of intelligence of the white man can wish that the Hopis should continue in this disgusting ceremony of holding a filthy snake in one's mouth for five or ten minutes at a time."

Indian Sustained.

The Sweet papers sustain the young Indian in his declaration that the snake dance is a "fake." A number of witnesses, one of them a former ex-high-priest of the snake clan, tell how, in the annual snake chase, all kinds of snakes are taken. When a rattler is found, the hunters hold the reptile while the fangs are raked out and the poison sacs emptied. Sometimes the larger teeth are knocked out. It is appreciated that the injuries heal quickly and that fresh venom will form within four days, so there is renewed inspection in the underground kiva before the snakes are brought out to the open kiva.

No preventive medicine is taken and the emetic, after the dance, is drunk mainly as a cleanser of the fifth and slime left in the mouth and throat from the skins of the reptiles. Snake bite is feared by the priests as by the whites. Several tribal remedies for the effect of the venom are known.

It may be remembered that, early in the year, was a hue-and-cry over a circular "message" of Indian Commissioner Charles H. Burke in which recommendation was made to the Indians themselves that they discontinue some of their ceremonial dances that hardly agree with modern ethics. There was special reference to the Sioux sun dance, with its acute tortures, of the "give-away" festival, in which members of certain tribes have been wont to beggar themselves and their families, and of the dance with poisonous snakes. In the letter also was reference to the time that was wasted and a recommendation that seed time and harvest, at least, be spared for work, while there was reiteration of the oft-repeated warning against drugs and intoxicants.

Practices Immoral.

Possibly the Indian bureau's answer with respect to the Hopi is contained in the portfolio of papers gathered by Mr. Sweet. Copies of the evidence have been passed on to the Indian Rights association which now for at least once in its history is in full accord with the bureau. The association now is represented in the Southwest by S. M. Brosius. He is making inspection of the condition of southwestern Indian tribes and only incidentally is taking up the Hopi feature. Leaving the unprintable report merely as corroborative evidence, stating that neither the commissioner and his bureau nor the Indian Rights association is seeking to destroy any Indian customs of historical or ethnological value, he expresses his belief that the time has come when the Indian should be discouraged, at least in his abandonment to filthy and immoral practices that are known in the period of tribal license that is coincident with the celebration of the snake and some other dances of the southwestern pueblo-dwelling tribes.

Pueblo Dances Loathsome.

A noted scientist in 1915 wrote of Pueblo dances in New Mexico as "loathsome and repugnant." Cushing and others have written for scientific reading only, of some of the dance practices of the Zuni. Possibly the mildest of the official comments on the Hopi dances is one by Miss Sarah E. Abbott, who lately retired after long service at Hotaville. "After twenty-two years of work among the Indians, I have, long ago, decided that most of the Katchina dances are not a place for a clean-thinking person."

Flat assertion is made within the Indian department that girls and boys, after careful instruction in morals in the boarding schools, go back to the Hopi villages to be engulfed in filthy practices and immoralities that too often accompany the dances. According to J. R. Whitwell, assistant superintendent and principal teacher of the Phoenix Indian Industrial school, "Unless we attend to the uncivilizing influences among the Indians, we might as well stop our attempts toward civilizing."—Los Angeles Times.

REUNITED AFTER 50 YEARS

Two Brothers Who Parted in England Meet at Detroit.

Fifty-two years ago two brothers said good-by to each other in a little town in the coal mining district of Cornwall, England.

"James, I believe the United States is the place for us," said William Hawkins, then twenty-seven years old. "You will do best by going there as I am to do."

"Perhaps," said James, "But I am going to try England for a while yet." "At any rate, it will be easy for you to find me in the United States when you do come," William said.

When he came to this country he went to Calumet, Mich. A few years later James came to McDonald, Pa.

But it wasn't so easy to find each other as the two brothers had imagined. Forty years went by before William learned James' address. Since then they corresponded, but never visited each other.

Recently James came to Detroit. At the station he was met by a strange man, nearly eighty years old.

"This is your brother, William," said a daughter to him. And for the first time in more than half a century the two shook hands.

ARMY GETS RUSS CAPTAIN

Former Officer for Czar Enlists to Learn English.

Private John Roberts was recruiting at South Ferry, New York, for the Sixteenth infantry, United States army, when a slight, dark man applied with documents to show he had been wounded twice in the war and shot by foes of Kerensky and served in Wrangel's White army. Roberts hustled him to the Army building, 89 Whitehall street. He was Alexander Tchouvaldji, a captain in the Russian army under the late czar.

He was twice wounded when the original force attacked Germany. He fought under Kerensky and then under Wrangel. Then he went with his patrimony to Robert college, Constantinople.

As a linguist he was interpreter for the allied censorship office in the Balkan troubles. Finally he came here and obtained a job washing dishes in a Third street restaurant.

Figuring he could better master English in the United States army, he joined for three years.

FIND GELATIN IN SEAWEED

Plant Grows in Large Quantities on Coast of California.

New sources of food gelatin have been developed in Lower California, where great quantities of seaweed are being treated and reduced to a very clear and nearly tasteless vegetable gelatin of high quality. Consul Leighton Hope, Ensenada, informs the Department of Commerce at Washington. The weed gathered is known as gerleweed, and as many as fifteen varieties exist along the Lower California coast. It grows at varying depths from one to ten fathoms or even deeper, and always on rocks, never in sand.

It is gathered by divers working under scientific methods with air pumps and diving bells. The weed is first dried in the sun, then boiled and exposed to a freezing temperature. It is then exposed to the sun or artificial heat, the water evaporated and the gelatinous product produced.

MAN IS CLAWED BY EAGLE

Owner of Laundry Asks Police for Permit to Shoot Bird.

G. Frank Fossa, proprietor of a laundry at Nashua, N. H., was savagely attacked by a large bird, believed to be an eagle, and his face and hands were clawed, requiring the services of a physician.

Fossa was looking over a new smokestack on his laundry at the South end when the huge bird swooped from the air and beat him with its wings and clawed him about the face and hands. The day before the bird had attacked a painter who was at work on the stack and it was with difficulty that the painter beat off the bird and made his way to safety from the top of the 80-foot stack. Fossa has appealed to the police for permission to shoot the bird, which he believes to be an eagle.

FREE CRANK CASE SERVICE.

This is the time of year when the transmission bands in a Ford car chatter because of the dilution of the oil with unburned gas. We will drain your crank case and put in some of that good Warco oil, which we have sold for the last three years and which our customers claim is the best Ford oil made.

VICTIMS OF AUTO ACCIDENT.

The condition of Harvey S. Heffner who was injured Thursday afternoon in an auto collision near the Hartman farm, is much improved. An X-Ray examination did not show that he was injured internally and he was feeling fine all day Friday. Mrs. Heffner returned home from the hospital last night and reports that her daughter, Miss Mary, is getting along nicely. Mrs. John Bell, another one of the occupants of the Heffner sedan who was thought at first to have suffered a fracture of her left thigh is also getting along nicely. The X-Ray showed that her thigh is not broken but that the ligaments were badly sprained and swollen. She will probably be laid up for some time.

JAPAN'S BUDDHA ESCAPES QUAKE

Huge Bronze Idol of Kamakura Still Intact.

IS SEVEN CENTURIES OLD

"The great bronze Buddha of Kamakura, the escape of which from damage by the recent earthquake is reported to be the subject of much rejoicing among pious Buddhists of Japan, is one of the truly wonderful statues of the world," says a bulletin from the National Geographic society. "Huge as the statue is—fifty feet high in a sitting posture—it is faithfully proportioned and its features show a beauty and calm serenity that could hardly be excelled in a carefully modeled small image. This is seen to be an accomplishment indeed when it is realized that the eyes alone are four feet long. The eye balls are of solid gold, and a large jewel-like boss in the center of the forehead is made of a thirty-pound lump of silver.

Has Weathered Many Storms.

"The Great Buddha, or the Daibutsu as the Japanese call the image, has sat in its present position since 1252 and in its nearly seven centuries has looked out upon more than one great catastrophe. It has itself been endangered on several occasions. It was originally enclosed by a great temple structure, but this was destroyed by tidal waves in 1380 and again two years after Columbus discovered America. Since then the Titanic figure has sat unsheltered towering against its background of green trees and hills.

"The Kamakura Daibutsu, like most bronze statues, consists only of a shell of metal and is hollow inside. A passageway leads to the interior from which one may climb on ladders to the level of the shoulders and may peep out through tiny windows.

"Only in Japan can be found today a bronze statue to compare with the gigantic image at Kamakura. There is one other Daibutsu, at Nara, near Osaka, which is fifty-three feet high. This was the original colossal bronze Buddha of the islands and was cast in 749 A. D. Unlike the Kamakura statue it is still sheltered by a building.

Kamakura Once Japan's Capital.

"The Christ of the Andes on the Chile-Argentine line, one of the largest bronzes outside Japan, is 26 feet high. The Colossus of Rhodes, perhaps the best known of ancient huge bronze statues, is believed to have been 90 to 100 feet high in a standing posture. An earthquake, interestingly enough, brought about its destruction before the Christian era.

"The Daibutsu is one of the few remaining symbols of the past greatness of Kamakura, now a modest fishing village and watering place, but once the real capital of Japan. There in 1192 Minamoto Yoritomo seized the governmental power and set himself up as the first Shogun, leaving the emperor a mere puppet at Kyoto. The new capital grew rapidly and before many years had a population as great as Cleveland or St. Louis. It was burned by an invading army in 1333 but partly restored. After 1455, however, when it lost even minor government institutions, it declined rapidly. "Kamakura is only about a dozen miles south of Yokohama across the little peninsula that helps enclose Tokyo bay on the southwest. Being thus in easy reach of Yokohama and Tokyo and the teeming plains nearby, the Great Buddha of Kamakura draws annually many thousands of pilgrims from the Buddhist portion of the population and is probably much better known than the slightly larger Daibutsu at Nara."

WATCHDOGS GET A RAISE

Ministry Concedes 10 Cents a Month Is Poor Pay.

'Tis sweet to hear the watchdog's honest bark resounding in the yards of the French arsenals, but not even a dog can live on 10 cents a month, the present state allowance.

This is the plaint of the French minister of marine. He has specified that the amount of daily indemnity to be accorded the workman or watchman entrusted with maintenance of watchdogs shall be fixed by the director of arsenals, who also will decide upon the manner of carrying out these provisions.
